German Finance in Trouble Prisons in the Air New Way to Travel Mr. Baer and Mr. Carnera

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

From the worldwide point of view the serious news is suspension of payments by the German Reichsbank, which means that Germany stops paying even private debts. It is not merely the usual default on international debts.

Wise Paris "fears the worst" as usual; in this instance, that Germany's financial condition is far worse than the world knows, worse than Germany realizes or cares to admit. The substantial Paris Temps says of the Reichsbank payment suspension, "it is needless to insist on the gravity of this measure. It demonstrates the desperate situation in which Germany finds itself."

Mayor LaGuardia, of New York, asks Washington for seventeen millions to build a criminal courts skyscraper, with a prison on the upper floors. Such prisons in the air are in use in several modern cities, Los Angeles and Miami, among others.

So-called civilization used to put graveyards on hill tops, that the dead might enjoy a fine view, incidentally allowing disease germs to run down hill into open wells. Old prisons were in holes and dungeons underground.

The skyscraper prison is based on common sense. Skyscraper prisoners cannot get out, since a drop of fifteen or more stories would be involved, and lynching mobs cannot get in. Our kind civilization demands many precautions.

Big New York City's credit is fairly good, in spite of loose talk about bond interest default. German and other cities will read with emotion that New York's Controller McGoldrick borrows millions at one per cent interest.

This is due partly to the fact that banks and financial houses are "chocked with cash" and cannot lend it.

The latest gold rush is in and near Grand Forks, British Columbia. Prospectors have staked out five thousand acres of claims, some of them on city golf links.

Mr. Ben Smith, of New York, who specializes in gold, and makes it pay, says Americans should investigate gold mining possibilities in Canada and British Columbia. They might profitably investigate in Russia, also, but Russia will not let you have the gold, if you find it.

Mr. Ben Smith's travelling methods show what flying machines can do. He recently started around the world with his family by floating steamer. On the way, in Java, he thought he would like to see the Grand National steeplechase, and flew back to England, from that point. Saw the race and flew back to join his family and their ship at an African port. Landing in New York, he flew to California, took another plane to British Columbia, flew back via San Francisco to New York. He thus saves months of old fashioned "high speed travel."

Next Thursday occurs the Carnera-Baer prize fight, and there is much interest. Carnera, Italian, is well described as the "man-mountain," sometimes as the "fighting mastodon."

For box office reason, Mr. Baer is advertised as a "Jewish heavyweight prize fighter, although not on the soundest ethnological basis. According to the "New Yorker" Baer's mother was a Scotch-Irish lady over six feet tall, weighing more than two hundred pounds. His father was half Jewish only. The son grew strong, slaughtering and chopping up calves and sheep for his father.

If he wins, Scotchmen and Irishmen will claim the victory for the mother's fighting blood. His Jewish admirers will say that the Jewish quarter of his brain did the thinking and won the fight.

It is to be remembered, however, that if Spinoza, Disraeli, the original Rothschild and Malonides got in the ring with Carnera, all at the same time, Carnera with leisurely ease could knock out all four, which proves that being heavyweight champion does not amount to much, also, lest the ambitious young forget, it may once more be stated that if Carnera, Baer and any other two human fighters that ever lived, entered a ring with a full grown gorilla, and made the gorilla angry, they would not last two minutes. The gorilla, however, being a decent animal, would not fight, unless offended, and other gorillas, more respect-

'Suicide Guard' Over Faber

POLICE FEAR ABE PLOT TO CHEAT LAW

State Trooper Is to Sit and Watch His Every Move; Three Exercise

Fear that Abe Faber might attempt to end his life to cheat the electric chair led Dedham officials today to place a 24-hour guard directly in front of his cell.

Jail officials expressed their fear to Lieutenant Thomas H. Mitchell, commander of the state police guard assigned to the jail. Lieutenant Mitchell ordered one of state police officers to sit directly in front of Faber's cell and watch every movement of the convicted slayer.

Jail officials became apprehensive of Faber after hearing him moan continually since the jury returned their verdict condemning him to the electric chair.

"DOESN'T WANT TO LIVE"

Faber's moans are interspersed with cries of "I don't want to live," according to jail officers.

State police under Lieutenant Mitchell have maintained a 24-hour watch on Faber and the Millen brothers since they were imprisoned in the Dedham jail on their return from New York last March. Until today the officers on watch have been seated at each of the "murderers' row" cells.

The change in orders was made today after several jail guards pointed out that a prisoner had hanged himself with his trousers while the Millens and Faber were on trial.

It was pointed out that Faber

Healey Must Stay Abed

Washington, June 11 (AP)—Physicians attending Representative Arthur M. Healey, Democrat, of Somerville, ass., said today it would be several days before he could leave the hospital. He is suffering from an infection of the face.

Slayer Is Hunted In Cambridge

In a surprise twist, investigation into the double slaying of Paul A. Caouette an dhis pretty wife, Alice in Lowell, turned to Somerville and Cambridge today when Deputy Police Superintendent Michael H. Winn of Lowell went there and questioned several residents.

Deputy Winn's surprise trip was made after investigators had turned to a theory that the Lowell couple were slain by a frustrated admirer of Mrs. Caouette, whom she had spurned.

MURDERED COUPLE BURIED

Through their questioning, state detectives hope to come upon a clue to some man who might have been annoying Mrs. Caouette and who, crazed by his hopeless and unwanted love for the woman who was devoted to her husband, finally shot the couple to death.

While the search for the slayer was proceeding, funeral services for

LINDY PUTS BIG PLANE TO TEST

By Associated Press

Bridgeport, Ct., June 11—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh lifted the new giant Sikorsky flying boat S-42 out of Long Island in Stratford today for a long test.

With Lindbergh were Raymond Quick of the U. S. Department of Commerce and William Steinmuller of the Aeronautics International, as official observers.

For more than an hour the noted flier zoomed, dipped and veered, putting the craft through every air antic known to flying. Time and again the craft dropped almost to the water, then shot up several thousand feet. Hundreds of persons saw the test.

Women Escape With Cuts in Crash

Miss Lillian C. Anderson, 36, of 73 Middle street, Woburn, and her mother, Mrs. Hannah Anderson, 64, were injured today when their car crashed into the rear of a car driven by Walter J. Murray, 64 Third avenue, Lowell, in Arlington.

The two women were taken to the Symmes Arlington hospital and, after treatment for cuts, returned home.

WALSH PICKS COLE FOR GOVERNOR

Ely Agrees to Choice; 'Stop Curley' Move Also Discussed

Other Political Story on Page 3

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

"General Cole must be nominated for governor."

The mandate was laid down by Senator David I. Walsh in a private conference with leading Democrats preparatory to the party's pre-primary convention at Worcester beginning Thursday.

Governor Ely attended the conference at the Copley-Plaza, and agreed to abide by Senator Walsh's decision in the matter.

Chairman Joseph A. Maynard of the Democratic State Committee and ex-Mayor John F. Fitzgerald were among others present.

COLE AGREES

General Charles H. Cole, the piece-de-resistance of the conference, later consulted with Walsh and other conferees and he agreed to make the fight for Governor, even if with reluctance. He is personally favorable to State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley for Governor.

The strategy of "Stop Curley" and "Stop Hurley" was discussed.

Governor Ely is understood to have ventured the belief they might "control" 300 delegates by their joint efforts, but that Cole, on his own strength and by his own efforts, would have to produce the other 100 delegates necessary to in-

Songs of Love Hide Plane Tragedy

LINER CRASHED ON WOODED MOUNTAIN FAR IN CATSKILLS

By RAYMOND C. BAKER

International News Service Staff Correspondent

Livingston Manor, N. Y., June 11—The pilot of a searching plane from Wurstboro airport reported this afternoon that he had found the wreckage of the missing American Airline passenger transport at Mongaup Park, near here, and that all aboard were dead.

The pilot made his report to state police and searching parties immediately started for the scene.

The plane burned when it crashed, according to the flier's report. It came down in an almost inaccessible spot in the rocky Catskill Mountains territory, miles from any human habitation.

State police and Dr. Victor Bourke, coroner of Livingston Manor, set out for the scene. The searching plane whose pilot sighted the wrecked craft almost two days after it left Newark airport for Chicago returned to the Livingston Manor airport.

Some time was expected to elapse before full details of the tragedy became known.

The scene of the crash is an isolated one. The nearest farmhouse is four miles away and the nearest telephone twice that.

The wrecked liner carried seven persons—four passengers, a stewardess, a pilot and co-pilot.

Those aboard the ship were:

CLYDE HOLBROOK, pilot.
"TAT" BARRON, co-pilot.
MARGARET HUCHERBY, stewardess.
W. A. CASS of Buffalo.
H. C. COFFINS, Buffalo.
W. B. RADER, Buffalo.
H. PINSLEY, Great Neck, N. Y.

PLANE FAR OFF COURSE

The pilot who made the discovery was Ted Hallock, local flier, working out of the Wurstboro airport.

He and scores of others had scoured the territory between the eastern ridges of the Catskills and the Hudson, while hope steadily faded that any of the seven aboard might have escaped with their lives.

Indications were that the pilot of the wrecked plane, Clyde Holbrook, 38-year-old veteran, with more than 10,000 hours of flying experience, had attempted to reach the well-equipped Liberty airport, when his huge plane became crippled in a sudden storm, but had overshot his mark. The scene of the crash was considerably off his course.

Hallock apparently was unable

New York Selling Eight-Cent Milk

New York, June 11 (AP)—The city of New York, declaring malnutrition of many of its people is an emergency and a menace to public health, went into the milk business today. Ten thousand quarts of grade B milk were put on sale at 53 baby health stations at eight cents a quart, five cents under the regular price.

Belgium, Czechs Default on Debts

Washington, June 11 (INS)—Both Belgium and Czechoslovakia have notified the State Department of their intention to default outright the June 15 debt installment.

TWO ANTI-NAZI PICKETS HELD

Two anti-Nazi "sandwich men" were arrested today while picketing in front of the German consulate, 131 State street, while hundreds of brokers and clerks looked on.

The men, John Michaels, 40, of Thomas park, South Boston, and Henry Lambert, 20, of Pine street, Cambridge, were arrested by officers of the Milk street station who had anticipated their arrival. They were charged with sauntering and loitering.

Michaels and Lambert, said to be members of the International Labor Defense league, were sandwiched in between signs which demanded the release of Thaelmann, labor leader imprisoned by "Hitler's murder court."

Boy, 3, Dying in 15-Ft. Window Fall

Robert J. Edgar, 3-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Edgar of 4 Gordon street, Jamaica Plain, is dying at the City hospital after a 45-foot fall from a window in his home. The child pushed a screen from the window and fell to the sidewalk. Neighbors took the child to the City hospital, where his name was placed on the danger list.

Havana, June 11 (AP)—One man was killed and several others were wounded when a bomb exploded today in the shopping district.

2000 KILLED IN HURRICANES

By International News Service

San Salvador, June 11 — Two thousand persons were killed in San Salvador and vicinity by the hurricanes that swept the republic over the week-end, relief workers estimated today.

L. C. Calloway, Jr., manager of the Pan-American Airways airport here, who completed a flight over the stricken area, reported many villages destroyed.

A steamer was sunk at the mouth of the Lempa river, Calloway said. He was unable to identify it.

Twenty Die in Train Crash

Lapoia, Spain, June 11 (INS)—Twenty persons were killed and many injured in a collision between a train and an automobile bus near here today.

3 R. I. BANDITS SEIZE $3000

Providance, June 11—Three bandits, all wearing dark glasses, herded the cashier and four shipping clerks into a an office at the Big Chief Market in Eddy street shortly after opening time today and escaped with $3000.

The money, representing Saturday's receipts, was being counted by David Cohen, 22, cashier, when one bandit entered and held up Cohen.

Then two other bandits appeared, with the four clerks marching ahead. All five employes were placed in another office and the trio ran out of the market.

Cohen raced after them, leaped into the car of Charles LeMaca, a Boston salesman, who was just parking his machine, and they pursued the bandits for a quarter of a mile, halting when two shots were fired at them.

A Timely Warning

IN a recent speech, National Commander Edward A. Hayes of the American Legion said:

"We of the American Legion believe it is time for the people to take a decided stand against some of the strange tenets that are finding foothold and spreading to destroy the principles of freedom and democracy upon which our nation was founded."

He has given voice to the same thought on more than one occasion. His words have been widely read. They are timely. They are sinking in.

The National Commander of the Legion does well to give public utterance to his convictions on HUGE THRONG SEES 1368 GET DIPLOMAS AT BOSTON U.

HARVARD HEAD HONORED AT EXERCISES

Speaker Urges 6-Year High School Term to Aid Youth

Boston University today held its 81st commencement at the Boston Arena before 10,000 spectators, who saw 1368 students receive their degrees.

Seven honorary degrees were presented. Doctor of humanities was bestowed upon James Bryant Conant, president of Harvard University.

Francis William Snow, composer and organist at Trinity church, was awarded the degree of doctor of music. Doctor of laws was conferred upon Wilford Denny Gray, Superior Court judge; George Lowell Mayberry, attorney; Daniel T. O'Connell, Superior Court judge; John Lawrence Seaton, president of Albion College, Michigan, and George Frederick Zook, federal commissioner of education.

URGES LONGER TRAINING

Dr. Zook, principal speaker at the exercises, advocated the addition of two years to the present high school training.

"I am convinced," he said, "that the American high school ends altogether too soon to give adequate opportunity to boys and girls who do not wish to go to college to choose and prepare for life's opportunities and responsibilities.

"As I see it, there can be but one answer for the public schools to give this problem. There must be an extension of the secondary school period of training for at least two years.

"Through this medium it would make it both feasible and fashionable for young men and women who do not wish college training to prepare themselves in a wide range of cultural, social intelligence and vocational work suited to the interests and the needs of the communities in which they live."

WOULD AID YOUTH

"Such an addition to the American school system cannot be merely a junior college, but must be technical enough so that the youth may have the opportunity of learning one of the many new vocations which a changing economic life is constantly producing.

"Child labor laws are not enough to solve the problems confronting youth. Those laws keep the young men and women out of factories, but offer nothing instead.

"In the profession of crime during 1929-30 the number of 15 to 17-year-old persons in jail increased 7.4 per cent. The 18-year-old group 3.2 per cent, the 19-year-old group 16.3. Most convictions were of people between 21 and 24 years of age.

SEES REAL OFFER

"These young people left school and wished to earn their own living. We have the problem of affording these young people an opportunity to work at something which is real and yet something that does not result in a product in competition with the great army of wage earners."

Fifty-six students were graduated with honors. Professor Irving C. Whittemore of the college of business administration served as chief marshal in the processional, aided by two associates, Professors William G. Sutcliffe and James P. Mason. Former Governor Frank G. Allen, vice-chairman of the board of trustees, presided. John L. Seaton pronounced the invocation. Dr. Lewis O. Hartman of the board of trustees gave the benediction.

3 COUPLES GRADUATED

Three married couples were presented with their degrees. They are Rev. and Mrs. James R. Reed, Bryantville; Mr. and Mrs. Troy M. Wakefield, Hebronville, and Mr. and Mrs. Seldon D. Kelley, of Malden.

Clarence De Mar, marathon runner, received a Master of Education degree. Al Marsters, of Arlington, former all-American halfback at Dartmouth, and former backfield coach at B. U., was awarded his Bachelor of Laws degree.

Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield, seated on the platform with other distinguished guests praised the wonderful achievements of the University during the past few years. Nine graduates were given commissions of second lieutenants in the R. O. T. C.

Dr. Lowell Honored

Middlebury, Vt., June 11 (AP)—Dr. A. Lawrence Lowell, president emeritus of Harvard University, today received the honorary degree of doctor of laws at the 134th commencement of Middlebury College.

Worker Overcome at Fuller's Home

Louis Weintraub, 30, of 2003 Commonwealth avenue, Brighton, was overcome by a chemical gas today while fumigating the winter home of former Governor Alvan T. Fuller on Beacon street, Back Bay.

George Fabbat of Somerville, a fellow worker, carried Weintraub into the open aid and he was taken to City Hospital. His condition is not serious.

2 HONORED FOR MILLEN ARREST

Police Commissioner Eugene Hultman today gave two of his men credit for the solution of the Needham Trust Co. holdup mystery.

In a surprise general order, the commissioner awarded two weeks' vacation and the departmental medal of honor to Sergeant Charles F. Eldridge of Station 16, Back Bay, and Patrolman Edward A. McDonnell of Station 9, Dudley street, Roxbury.

The awards were made for "unusually meritorious service in the apprehension and conviction of the criminals guilty of murder committed during the holdup of the Needham Trust Co., February 2, 1934."

It was Eldridge who searched the Millens' apartment at 1175 Beacon street and found the two Mezzinger letters that linked the two brothers and Abe Faber to the double murder and robbery.

On February 11 McDonnell discovered the battery repair shop in which the battery of the bandit car had been left.

The two men will receive their medals at 11 a. m. tomorrow.

Home Inmates to View "Fleet"

New York, June 11 (INS)—Ever since the fleet came in, the 2400 patients at the City Home on Welfare Island have been talking eagerly about the great naval display in the Hudson and wondering whether they would ever have a chance to see it.

Their turn comes today. Superintendent Lewis has chartered the Riverside, a ferryboat, to carry groups of 75 on cruises up the Hudson as far as Yonkers.

MAD SUITOR IS HUNTED

the murdered couple were conducted at 2 p. m. today in the Prospect Hill Conbgregational Church, Bow street, Somerville, of which Mrs. Caouette was a member and where she and Caouette were carried.

The services were conducted by the Reverend Walter B. Jerge, pastor, and although there was organ music, singing was omitted. Burial was in Cambridge cemetery, Cambridge.

Nearly 100 Lowell police and state troopers were combing the vicinity of the Caouette farm in Varnum avenue, Lowell, today in search for the murder weapon, while state chemists were testing samples of what police believe to be dried blood, scraped from a seat in Caouette's auto.

CLUE IN AUTO

If the specimens are found to be human blood and not too old, it will swing police belief to the theory that Caouette at least was shot while seated in the machine.

Three bullet wounds were found in his body, two in the back and chest and one in the head. All bullets had entered from the rear.

Mrs. Caouette, however, had been facing the assailant, the bullet wound showing that the slug had entered her forehead and ripped out through the back of the head.

With orders to "shoot on sight," state troopers were searching the Centerville section today for a 27-year-old man they wish to question in connection with the double slaying. This man, of the "ruthless" type, has been questioned in connection with several breaks.

Possibility that the Caouettes were killed by a gun stolen from the home of a Lowell policeman loomed today, following the revelation made by Patrolman John T. Whelan that his home was entered last May and two revolvers and a box of cartridges stolen.

One of the guns was a .32-calibre Colt automatic which he used in police work, the officer said.

The bullet taken from the head of Mrs. Caouette and two cartridge shells found near her body are the brass jacketed shells used in a .22-caliber automatic pistol.

The same thief stole a revolver from the home of Patrolman John H. Murphy in another break.

Another significant fact that a housebreaker may have committed the murders, according to police is that the Caouette home was broken into in November of last year.

Entrance was gained at that time by breaking the glass over the latch, a method used in other breaks. The house was ransacked and articles were uselessly broken as they had been in breaks at a number of houses.

FINGER PRINTS STUDIED

Alarmed when word spread that dangerous men armed with stolen guns and a large supply of ammunition, residents throughout Tyngsboro-Lowell line were demanding additional protection.

Captain Charles J. Van Amburg, state ballistics expert, is examining finger prints found on a blood-stained roadster belonging to Caouette and his report is expected to reach investigators in Lowell today.

Additional finger prints were found on a strong box in a closet of the Caouette cottage and these now are in Captain Van Amburg's possession for examination.

100 WOMEN IN RIOT AT LYNN STONE AUTO

Workers at a Leather Plant Attacked by Strikers

A crowd of more than 100 women today stoned an auto full of employes of the Goniprow Kid Company in Market square, Lynn.

This concern is one of the few leather plants in the city that has not made its peace with the National Leather Workers' Union.

The barrage was fired at the car of Peter Olga, of Orchard street, Lynn, as he was picking up workers to take them to the plant this morning.

He had three other men in the car at the time. They managed to duck to the floor and escape the worst of the rock barrage.

Olga reported the attack to the police, but by the time that a squad was sent to the scene the women had left.

Two Lynn policemen heard the tinkle of shattering glass near the Goniprow plant early today.

As they turned to look they noticed three men running away. After a chase of a block, the three climbed into an automobile and got away. The police did not get the registration number.

Starving Man Dies

SUSPECT HELD AFTER CHASE

Roaring over the Mystic Valley parkway Patrolman Roy Hudgins and Fred King of the Metropolitan police captured an alleged counterfeit money chief today in a chase from Medford into Winchester.

The captive gave his name as Joseph Pimental, 38, of Line street, Somerville, but police claim he is better known in New York, from where the counterfeit ring operates.

On Pimental were found $80 in good money and one counterfeit $10 bill. Police believe, however, there may be a cache in the high-priced, special bodied car he was driving, and the machine may be stripped.

Patrolman Hudgins and King were in a cruiser car near the Mystic Lakes when they picked up the sedan, with New York plates.

Hudgins recognized the numbers as those flashed from New York with a request that the car be held.

As the Metropolitan officers started in pursuit, the driver put on speed and for two miles the race continued.

Rocket Just Spits Up at Stratosphere

New York, June 11 (INS)—Members of the American Rocket Society solemnly gathered on the beach at Great Kills, Staten Island, for what they believed would be a rocket flight that would pioneer the way for one-mile a second not only into the stratosphere, but also beyond the earth's field of gravity.

The rocket sputtered and whistled when a match was touched to the fuse and then it settled back motionless.

TUGWELL FIGHT IN SENATE IS IN UPROAR

Big Crowd Cheers Both Sides; Wheeler Hits "Racket" Tactics

By Associated Press

Washington, June 11—Rexford G. Tugwell determinedly defended Administration efforts to have Congress strengthen the Agricultural Adjustment Act at a Senate hearing today, giving rise to dissension in the committee and disorder in the room.

Now Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, he was being examined in connection with the President having nominated him to be undersecretary at an increase in salary from $7500 to $10,000 a year.

Senators Smith and Byrd, South Carolina and Virginia Democrats, who have objected to the promotion, led the questioning heard by the biggest crowd at any Senate hearing of the year.

Remarks by Byrd led Senator Wheeler (D., Montana) to maintain that the investigation was being run as "a political racket." He characterized the Virginian's criticism of the AAA amendment as a "stump speech."

"Hurrah for Byrd!" had greeted Byrd as he concluded.

"Tugwell!" yelled another spectator, and Wheeler demanded demonstrators be thrown out.

AIR RIDES GIVE BLIND A THRILL

Riding in an airplane is like sitting in a rocking chair.

This is the opinion of 13 blind boys from the Perkins Institution for the Blind in Watertown, who visited the Boston Airport to "feel" the planes in their hangars.

The visit to the airport climaxed a year's study in transportation. According to Miss Ethel D. Evans, instructor, who accompanied the boys, money for their trip was earned by them during the winter caring for hens.

John Shobe, veteran pilot for the American Airways, took them up, through the courtesy of Wellington Wright. Shobe, however, were not in the least unfamiliar with plane. For during the year they have made many models of various types of flying craft.

Haydan Nichols of Vermont, one of the first boys to take a ride in the Stinson cabin plane, likened the sensation of riding in the air to sitting in an automobile.

Shobe spiralled, bank and looped for the amusement of the boys. At no time were the boys afraid. Their first comment on landing was, "The trip wasn't long enough."

Girl Doctor, Three Wives and Two Husbands Are Among B. U. Graduates

MRS. SNEED REV. MR. SNEED MRS. KELLEY S. D. KELLEY

The Rev. and Mrs. James R. Sneed of Bryantville and Mr. and Mrs. Sedlen Dee Kelley of Malden made it a family affair at the Boston University Commencement exercises, when both husbands and both wives received their degrees. More than 13,000 friends and relatives of the graduates attended the solemn observance. (Pictures by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

MISS SIMPSON MISS MATHER

Margaret Rose Simpson of Roxbury was one of the two girls at the Boston University School of Medicine to receive her M. D. degree. She was a high honor student. Eunice E. Mather, right, can now boast of two degrees, for not only did she receive her diploma from the Sargent School of Physical Education, but she won her MRS. last week by becoming Mrs. Leo Pelton.

DEMOCRATS TO RALLY BEHIND ROOSEVELT AT WORCESTER

HURLEY ENTERS CONTEST FOR GOVERNOR

State Treasurer Won't Make Deal; Lauds Senator Walsh

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Strong planks endorsing the Roosevelt and Ely administrations will form the arch of the Democratic platform to be adopted at the party convention in the Worcester municipal auditorium next Thursday.

These issues, raised by the Republicans in their platform and through sharp criticisms directed particularly by G. O. P. speakers at the national administration, will be fully met, Democratic leaders have decided. They will form the rallying point of the Democratic nominees in the coming campaign.

State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley is in the race for the gubernatorial endorsement at the convention, a long awaited formal announcement said.

HURLEY TELLS PLANS

Speaking at the annual outing of the Clinton town committee at Craigaile meadow pond, the state treasurer, after paying a tribute to Senator David L. Walsh, placed himself in the running and expressed confidence that he will win the endorsement. He said:

"I am content to rest my candidacy with the delegates to the convention who are the chosen representatives of the Democratic party. They know my record in office, my strength as a vote-getter and my ability to lead the party to victory in November. I would have gladly supported Governor Ely for a third term had he been willing to lead us.

"I confidently expect to be nominated to succeed Governor Ely. I have made no deals and will make none. I have made no promises. What support has come to me has been entirely voluntarily."

CURLEY VISITS CAPE

At this meeting the interests of former Mayor James M. Curley's candidacy were looked out for by former State Chairman Charles H. McGlue of the Democratic state committee. McGlue stated that he is satisfied that the Worcester County delegates are favorably disposed towards the former mayor.

The former mayor arrived back in Boston today after a conference last night with James Roosevelt in Marion. Prior to going to the Cape, Curley attended the golden jubilee mass in Fenway Park in honor of Cardinal O'Connell.

Hopes for postmaster appointments are tied up in the coming struggle for the gubernatorial endorsement. A lot of Republican postmasters have been allowed to remain in office since the new administration at Washington took charge. These appointments are expiring and many of the delegates or their friends are candidates for these positions. With James Roosevelt backing Curley, it is to be expected that these delegates will look kindly upon the former mayor's candidacy.

WATTE ATTACKS G. O. P., BACON

A scathing attack on the "liberal" G. O. P. platform adopted at the Worcester convention and upon the party's gubernatorial nominee, Lieut. Gov. Gaspar G. Bacon, was made in a statement issued today by Robert J. Watte, secretary-treasurer of the Massachusetts State Federation of Labor.

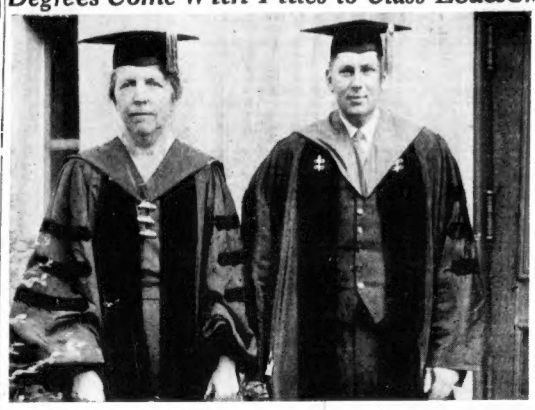
"It was interesting to note the performance of the Republican convention and the success in juggling when they drafted a positively 'liberal' platform onto the rugged, reactionary record of their standard bearer," Watt declared.

He accused Bacon of giving mere "lip service" for liberal measures which in spite of him, are in their way now to enactment.

Insull Home Robbed

Chicago, June 11 (AP)—The Insull home of Samuel Insull, Jr., on the Insull estate at Libertyville was looted of all its furnishings, art and valuables over the week-end.

Degrees Come With Titles to Class Leaders



DR. ADA COMSTOCK DR. BANCROFT BEATLEY

Dr. Ada L. Comstock, president of Radcliffe College, went to Simmons College today to deliver the Commencement address, "The Balanced Life," to the graduating class, while Dr. Bancroft Beatley conferred degrees on 380 after her first year as president.

MARION MASON POLLY CHURCHILL

LOUISE WOODMAN RUTH JACOBS BEATRICE VERNON

Degrees come after titles. Louise Woodman, the most attractive; Ruth Jacobs, the most artistic, and Baetrice Vernon, most versatile, by popular vote of their fellow classmates, left college with degrees of Bachelor of Science. They were graduated with 373 others at Simmons College. (Pictures by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

380 GRADUATES GET DIPLOMAS AT SIMMONS

Dr. Ada L. Comstock of Radcliffe Speaker at Exercises

The first Commencement exercises of Simmons College under the presidency of Dr. Bancroft Beatley were held today in the Auditorium at Longwood avenue and Riverway, 380 degrees being awarded with 34 certificates for completion of special courses.

The exercises mark the 29th annual commencement of the college. Of the 359 candidates for the degree of bachelor of science 268 were members of the senior class and 91 were graduates of other colleges who have completed special work at Simmons.

The Commencement address, "The Balanced Life," was given by Dr Ada L. Comstock, president of Radcliffe College.

Dean Jane Louise Mesnick presented the candidates for Bachelor of Science degree, and Dr. Robert M. Gay, dean of the graduate division, presented the 21 candidates for the Master's degree in Science.

The academic procession was led by Professor Wallace M. Turner and Professor Raymond Neal as marshals, followed by the candidates for Master's degree, Bachelor's degree, members of the faculty, the corporation, Dean Mesnick, Dr. Gay, Rev. Ashley Day Leavitt, President Comstock and President Beatley.

Dr. Leavitt opened the exercises with a prayer and closed them with the benediction.

Mrs. Marjorie Nash Nuhn, a Simmons graduate, sang with the college choir and Henry Gideon played the organ.

1000 IN MAINE OFFICE RACE

By Associated Press

Portland, Me., June 11—Maine holds an election next week and political observers of both parties have a weather eye open for signs bearing on the national picture. The candidate list totals nearly 1000.

The principal interest has centered on the total vote a militant Democratic party may poll.

Governor Louis J. Brann, Democrat, is unopposed for renamination. Four Republicans—Alfred K. Ames, Frank W. Carlton, B. W. Page and Donald P. Partridge—seek the right to oppose Governor Brann in the general election.

NRA REVIEWS ITS YEAR

By Universal Service

Washington, June 11—Standing at the half-way point of its two-year existence specified by Congress, the National Recovery Administration today headed toward relieving unenforcable and inequitable restrictions on business.

NRA plans, however, to strengthen its tenacious hold on the many regulations of business conduct which have proved worthy.

These tendencies were definitely marked today as the NRA looked backward at a year of endeavor codifying trade and industry, and forward to a year of consolidating its gains and correcting its errors.

The first year ends with a paralyzing strike threatened in the basic steel industry, and more labor troubles present or in the offing.

It finds the NRA fantastically attacked from within and without. Advisory groups including the Darrow Recovery Review Board have led bitter attacks. Adverse court decisions have been handed down.

Walsh Orator at State College

Amherst, June 11 (AP)—Honorary degrees were conferred upon Dr. Joel E. Goldthwait of Boston, Professor Ralph E. Smith of the University of California, and Horace Moses of Springfield at the commencement of Massachusetts State College today. Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts was commencement speaker, and the degrees were conferred by Dr. Hugh P. Baker, president of the college.

Surgeons' College Backs Insurance

Chicago, June 11 (INS)—Health and hospital insurance, long a controversial subject in medical circles, has been given the stamp of approval by the American College of Surgeons today. Approval was given with adoption by the board of regents of committee report following an eight-month study of health insurance designed to aid middle class families.

Ends Long Hike With Smile

WINSTON FROST ELEONORA SEARS

At the end of the trail. Eleonora Sears, Boston's leading society sportswoman and long distance hiker, went for a "walk" from Providence to Boston again this morning in an attempt to lower her own time standard for the distance. She failed, but she finished the 25-mile hik in great stride and proved she was tired by smiling for photographers as she entered her Beacon street home.

Dolly Dancer, Lady Luck's Football, Kicked Again

New York, June 11—Fickle Lady Luck certainly picked on the Dolly Sisters to show her vagaries. Less than 10 years ago they were the toast of Europe and the United States. The world was literally kissing their nimble toes.

Then—every time the Dolly Sisters played bacarat—they cleaned up thousands of dollars. At one time Rozika won $500,000 in one evening. Rozika and Jenny each had more than $1,000,000 in jewelry. Rozika landed love and a title and had the hopes of being co-mistress of a fortune of $500,000,000.

EVEN LOVE IS CRUEL

Today most of Rozika's jewelry is gone.

Her marriage to Mortimer Davis, Jr., son of the extremely wealthy Sir Mortimer of Canada, went the way of most Broadway unions.

But Jenny Dolly's life has been even more tragic.

She has never married. The beauty which helped to win her fame is gone. Eight plastic surgery operations were undergone to obliterate the scars left by an almost fatal accident early last year.

Last November Jenny's beautiful jewelry was sold at municipal auction. There was more than $1,000,000 worth of it and it brought only $300,000. Jenny didn't attend the sale. She was too heart-broken.

SHE CAN'T PAY FINE

The sale of Jenny's jewelry caused an investigation by the French government. They discovered she had failed to pay a luxury tax on one ring—a $250,000 diamond. So they sued her for $750,000.

And the other day Jenny lost her case. She was ordered to pay the fine and spend three days in jail. The sentence was suspended.

But Jenny can't pay the fine. If she defaults, she can be imprisoned for nine months. She intends to appeal, and until she knows what a higher court determines she will live in England.

Snowden in Comeback

London, June 11 (AP)—Notice that "I am returning to politics" was given today by Philip Snowden, former chancellor of the exchequer and leading figure in the Labor party, in the Daily Mail.

ELEO HIKES 47 MILES, THEN TAKES WALK

Society Sportswoman Fails to Break Own Record; Didn't Try

As fresh and nonchalant as if she had enjoyed her full quota of sleep, Miss Eleonora Sears, Boston sportswoman, sauntered out of her Beacon street home today for a round of social and business engagements.

It was then 11 o'clock, and at 8:35 a. m., after hiking 44 miles from City Hall, Providence, she had arrived at her home at 122 Beacon street. Her time was 19 hours, 20 minutes.

She failed to break her own record of 10 hours and 5 minutes, but said Miss Sears;

"I wasn't out to do any record-breaking last night—that was just an easy-going hike. I just happened to feel like walking.

4 COMPANIONS FAGGED

"June is no time to do any record-breaking—it's much too hot. A nice, crisp day in the fall is the time for that sort of thing.

"Fatigued? Not at all. I've many things to do today—business engagements and a luncheon."

The four young clubmen who accompanied Miss Sears on her hike, however, admitted being "plenty fagged. They are Stanley Haskinds, Winston Frost, David Ames and John Frost.

POLICE HALT PARTY

At Wrentham, the party was stopped by police early this morning and told to stay on the sidewalk. When Miss Sears disclosed her identity, they were allowed to proceed.

In 1924, on a trip from Laurel, Md., to Baltimore, Miss Sears was struck and painfully bruised by an automobile. To avert a similar accident, the party used an automobile headlight to guide the hiking socialite on this jaunt.

Her hiking costume was a short gray skirt, regulation stockings, brown shoes, white linen sports coat and brown hat. She wears a lightweight jersey sweater under her sports coat.

Former Brighton Couple Die in Fire

Mr. and Mrs. James T. Bell, formerly of Commonwealth avenue, Brighton, were burned to death in their summer cottage in Kankakee County, Ill., it was learned today. The Bells had made their home in Chicago for some time.

One daughter, Imogene, a senior at Brighton high school and in this year's graduating class was called home by the tragedy.

Walsh to Aid Convention

By Associated Press

Worcester, June 11—Assurance that he would attend the Democratic pre-primary convention in the Auditorium here Thursday was given today by Senator David I. Walsh. It had been previously stated he would be unable to attend because of press of business in Washington.

The feeling here was that he would have much to do with shaping the policies of the convention and considerable influence in selection of the various candidates.

The Democratic city committee meets tonight in the Jeffersonian Club to appoint committees and arrange for the convention and the "night before" banquet at the Bancroft Hotel.

FELON SOUGHT IN GIRL ATTACK

Pittsfield, June 11—The arrest of a man, whose criminal record includes three convictions for crimes in New York state, was expected momentarily by police today, after two 19-year-old girls charged that he had tried to attack them with a gun when they were changing into street clothes from a bathing suit.

Police officers are withholding the names of the young women, who admitted that they had accepted a lift from their assailant and had agreed to use his car to rid themselves of their wet swim suits.

Family Wash Is Lost in Blaze

Several hundred East Boston families today went without their "family wash" as the result of fire which swept the Commerial Laundry, 1085 Bennington street, Orient Heights.

Jonas Rosser, 50, 91 Pearl street, night watchman, was reported by physicians in critical condition after being saved from the burning building by Lieutenant James A. Dorsey.

The laundry of many families was saved and stacked up on the sidewalk away from the burning building.

You can see Barbara Holmes daily from 9 a. m. to 5:30 p. m. at the new free rental bureau on the fourth floor of the R. H. White Co.

WOMAN FREE IN CRASH DEATH

A manslaughter charge against Edith French of Elm street, Braintree, prominent in social circles, was dismissed in Dorchester district court today by Judge Sadie Shulman, who found no probable cause.

However, she was fined $50 on a charge of operating an automobile so as to endanger.

The charges arose out of an accident in Lenoxdale avenue, near Milton street, on May 18. At that time a car driven by Miss French crashed into another auto, killing William Connolly, 18, of Readdy street, Dorchester.

STEEL WORKERS OPPOSE BOARD

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, June 11—M. F. Tighe, president of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, today said "There is little or no merit" in the government's proposal for a special three-man board to settle disputes in the steel industry.

The veteran union leader, who has called a convention for June 14 in Pittsburgh to decide whether a strike will be called, said his objection to the plan was based partly on the impracticability of "finding men who utterly would have no interest in the steel industry" to serve as members of the board. He added:

"Even if three judges are appointed, it would be practically impossible to find a judge who didn't own at least one share of steel stock, or who didn't have an interest in the industry."

FIRST LADY TO DODGE PRESS

By Universal Service

Washington, June 11—Mrs. Roosevelt will go "off the record" for the five or six weeks of her husband's vacation this summer.

While the President cruises through the Panama Canal and in the Pacific, the First Lady hopes to come and go unobserved by the press that reports her every move in Washington, she said.

Consequently she will announce only two definite dates for the summer, a radio broadcast in Chicago on July 9, and meeting her husband on the Pacific Coast "whenever and wherever he lands."

A Timely Warning

the subject, and to let it be known that the great body of patriotic Americans who compose the American Legion, and for whom he speaks, feel that they are dedicated to the defense of American freedom and democracy.

Commander Hayes is particularly pointed and emphatic in denouncing the propaganda of Communism and Socialism, and their masquerading equivalent, collectivism in all its un-American forms.

He sees that all these theories are of alien origin; that they are not indigenous to our soil; that they are irreconcilable with the principles upon which America was founded and to which it owes its greatness.

"These movements," says he, "are spreading into our schools and colleges, into our churches and social organizations, even into official government circles as shown by recent startling events."

DOUBTLESS the Commander had in mind some of the repellent tenets of what is coming to be known as Tugwellism—the contention, for instance, that "the peasants of Russia, under a so-called proletarian government, are relatively better off than farmers in the United States"; the prediction of a POLICY OF CONTROL, despite recognition of the fact that it "displeases most Americans who are jealous of individual right"; the belief that our moral conceptions are inadequate to modern conditions, and that our public school system is antiquated because it teaches Americanism and not the vicious blend of Socialism and Communism, so dear to the Brain Trust.

"Collectivism" is the term the Tugwellians prefer to employ for Communism, but they know what they mean, and the American people are becoming equally aware of what this "collectivism" means.

There has been brought to our notice a pamphlet issued by the "Communist Party OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA" and the "Young Communist League," also "of the United States of America," addressed to the sailors of the American fleet now anchored in the Hudson River.

Among other things it declares:—"The Communist Party is your party." "Your interests and ours are the same." "We are all workers and we must stick together."

"Defend the Soviet Union and Soviet China." "Forward to a worker's and farmer's government in this country."

CAN anyone doubt, in the light of such flagrant and open sedition, that the words of National Commander Hayes of the American Legion are timely and justified?

And, how fitting it is that the soldiers of the republic, the men who have worn the uniform of Uncle Sam upon the field of battle, and carried the flag of their country with honor and distinction wherever they went——should be alert to the insidious dangers which lurk in our midst, and to the presence of malignant enemies within our gates—enemies of our form of government and of the freedom which has blessed our people from the earliest days of the country's foundation.

A threat of 200 union linemen employed by the Boston Elevated Railway to go on strike was made today in protest of employment of unskilled workers in removing poles and wires in Boylston street, Brookline, and several other PWA projects in the city.

According to Frank J. Smith, business manager of Electrical Workers' Union 104 (linemen), executives of the company said they are powerless to act because the work in Brookline is a PWA project under state supervision.

7 RESCUED BY POLICE BOAT

Four men aboard the Mary C., a small motor launch, were rescued today by the Boston police boat Edwin U. Curtis after they had drifted helpless in the outer harbor for more than six hours.

They are Richard and John Connors, brothers, of Everett, and Samuel Meech and Harry Latshaw, both of Malden.

Their engine was disabled, the rudder was broken, and their small craft was taking water when the police boat sighted them.

It was the second rescue that the police boat made over the weekend.

Three East Boston boys were near sinking in a skiff off Governor's Island, when the boat came to their rescue.

The three were put ashore at Constitution wharf. They are Daniel Mulane, 16, of Falcon street; Francis Norcott of Lexington street, and James Hartigan, 17, of Meridian street.

Historic Adams House Set for Bridal

Fannie C. Homans, Kin of President, to Wed June 30

One of the most important historical shrines in the nation as the home of two early Presidents of the United States, the Adams house in Quincy, will have its first marriage in a half century, when Fannie Crowinshield Homans, direct descendant of the family, will be wed there June 30.

Miss Homans is to become the bride of Howland Shaw Warren, of Brookline, law student at Harvard University. She is the great-great-granddaughter of John Adams, second President. The intended bride is a graduate of the Winsor School and attended Westover. She was presented to society during the 1930-31 season.

The last wedding in the famed house was performed in the drawing room, when Mary Adams, granddaughter of John Quincy Adams, sixth President, became the bride of Dr. Henry Parker Quincy. That was in June, 1877.

In the room, where this month's marriage will be performed, Lafayette and other leaders of the American Revolution were entertained by the second President of the United States.

FANNIE C. HOMANS

Marriage First in Half Century at Colonial Shrine

When the French leader returned to the United States, almost 50 years after his first visit, the townspeople of Quincy greeted him on the steps of the mansion. Among other leaders of the Colonies, who visited the house, were members of Adams' cabinet, and most of the governors of Massachusetts.

Store Bargains Seen by Babson

Strikes and seasonal decline in business, together with the adverse effects of a drouth, promise to help housewives of Boston to find some attractive bargains during the next few months, according to a survey issued by Roger W. Babson.

The statistician warned, however, that commodity prices are bound to go up later in the summer, and advises purchase of linens, household goods, clothing and canned goods.

BRITAIN VIEWED AS KEY TO WORLD TRADE RECOVERY

Editor's note: International News Service sent its brilliant foreign correspondent, H. R. Knickerbocker, on a tour through the British Isles, to gather first hand information on how Great Britain is defeating the depression. Knickerbocker has written a series of 12 stories, telling in detail the result of his trip. He has interviewed leaders in all lines of business, has gone through the Newcastle mines and visited the great manufacturing plants. With Great Britain defaulting on its debt payment due this country on June 15, the series is most timely. Following is the first story:

London, June 11—Is Britain really coming back?

These little islands, home of the monocle and the broad "A" are not quite as big as Oregon. Their population of 46,000,000 is just about one-third that of the United States.

But these little islands are the center of an empire with nearly 500,000,000 inhabitants, and every fourth human being in the world is a British subject.

These islands still use that strange form of currency called the pound sterling, and considerably more than half of the world's trade is still done in pounds, shillings and pence.

LARGEST U. S. CUSTOMER

If Britain comes back, if Britain really recovers, then the world has the first indisputable evidence that the crisis is over, and the depression behind us. Thousands of invisible links connect the economic welfare of this country with our own.

Britain is our largest customer. In the past she has bought from us an average of around half a billion dollars worth of goods a year, far more than any other country.

We, in turn, are third best customer of Britain. Britons today declare that, despite the progress they have made, there can be no complete recovery here until there is complete recovery in America.

The British answer to "How's business?" affects the answer to that same question in New York, Kansas City and San Francisco.

Britain, despite her tariffs, still buys more goods from abroad than any other country in the world. She buys near 18 per cent of everything the rest of the world exports.

BRITAIN'S RECOVERY POINT

This means that if Britain recovers, the world's purchasing power must have recovered, at least to the extent that Britain's recovery is dependent on her foreign trade.

For an answer to the question, "Is Britain really coming back?" the first fact to determine is the starting point of recovery. From what point did Britain recover? And that involves establishing from what point did Britain fall?

To put it in the familiar way, Britain fell out of the first story window while we fell from the top of the skyscraper. Here are the figures. In 1929 at the top, our national income was estimated at 85 billion dollars. In 1932 at the bottom it was 40 billion. Roughly, we were half as well off.

HIGHER INCOMES DROP

Britain in 1929, her top year, also, had a national income estimated at 20 billions. In 1932, also her bottom, her national income was 14 billion dollars. This meant a decline of only 20 per cent.

Even more telling are the figures on individual incomes. It is easy to compare the top ones. In the boom year, 1929, the United States had 574,032 persons making more than $10,000 a year. Their total income was $12,212,000,000.

By the next year, there were only 259,454 persons in America making more than $10,000 a year and the total income of this class had fallen to $6,789,000,000.

In Britain, on the other hand, in the boom year of 1929, there were 106,800 persons earning more than $10,000 a year and their total income was $2,957,000,000. In the lowest year, 1931-32, Britain still had 89,790 persons earning more than $10,000 a year and with a total income of $2,263,000,000.

UNEMPLOYMENT ACUTE HERE

The economic crisis hit us much harder than it hit Britain, that our famous big incomes were flattened down to almost exactly the British level.

That is what happened to the top fraction. What happened to the workers? The British Ministry of Labor has just published figures showing that, whereas the number of Americans unemployed in 1932 reached 40 per cent of the total number of workers employed in 1926, and in 1933 had receded to 35 per cent; in Britain the number of unemployed workers in 1932 were 22 per cent of the total number of available workers, and in 1933 the unemployed were 20 per cent of the available workers.

Thus, unemployment at its worst was approximately twice as acute in America as it ever was in Britain.

From another angle: Industrial production in America fell from 100 in 1928 to 57 in 1932; it fell in Britain to only 88.

National income, individual income, employment and production all show that America's fall was roughly twice as far and twice as hard as Britain's.

ON RECOVERY TRACK

But what has happened since then? Britain may not have fallen as hard as America did, but she fell hard enough to give her a fright. If she is coming back, how is she doing it? Is she leading us or trailing us? Can we learn from her or has she, perchance, learned from us?

It would appear that both countries are on the track of recovery. It may be a race for prosperity. But is Britain recovering, as she boasts, without any of those "novel and revolutionary experiments in America" upon which she looks so askance?

Or is she doing it, as a matter of fact, by the use of measures which, for Britain, are as radical as the New Deal was for America?

But first of all, what are the signs of her recovery?

(The second installment in the Knickerbocker series will appear in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.)

The fund started by the Boston Evening American to supply clear, cold drinking water to youngsters during hot weather, was substantially increased today by new pledges.

The first was a promise of 10 per cent of tonight's gross receipts at Coconaut Grove, Boston's new open-air night club.

The second was one of 50 per cent of Tuesday night's proceeds of the roller skating carnival at the Boston Arena.

Besides the dinner which will be served tonight at Coconaut Grove, there will be a complete floor show by the finest talent obtainable.

The roller skating carnival at the Tomorrow night, Manager George V. Brown said, will include races, vaudeville acts and general skating. Professional skaters

$15,000 Fire at R. M. Baker Estate

North Hampton, N. H., June 11 —Fire destroyed a barn and outbuildings on the summer estate here of Roland M. Baker, former postmaster of Boston. Baker estimated the loss at $15,000.

What Boston Evening American Readers Are Saying.

In contributing to this column, writers are asked to be brief. Letters which are too long, may not be used. Name and address of the contributor must accompany each letter, but, if requested, initials only will be used.

THE MALLOY TRAGEDY

Editor, Boston American:

Your editorial on the killing of Officer Malloy in Charlestown was right to the point. Might I suggest that your readers would be interested in a few more facts regarding this strange case.

A poor drunk who kills another in a brawl is sent to State Prison for 7 to 10 years for manslaughter, yet this Hart boy drove the stolen car that killed two boys less than two years ago and was found not guilty of manslaughter, nor sent to State Prison. Why not?

How he was set free, is a mystery, 'please solve it! Who let him free after a few months in the hospital? We want the facts. The American can find them.

Y. W. C. A. Clubhouse, D. L. R.

BIG HEART WANTED

Editor, Boston American:

Please try and see if any kind reader would get my mother a small carriage for our little sister. She is not well and my mother has to carry her all the time when she goes out.

My mother is a widow with 10 children, but only eight are at home and we find it hard on the aid my mother gets. We would like an ice chest, but you know it is terrible to ask for too much. So please see what you can do, as we have to move from here and don't know how.

You see how hard my mother gets along. I don't want to write what a hard time she has. Please try and get a carriage for her.

E. K.

Charlestown (address will be furnished).

ICE MEN TOO NOISY

Editor, Boston American:

If you want an exciting article for your paper, take up the question of ice peddlers in East Boston. People are crazy from the noise all day and nothing will be done about it by proper authorities.

Last year about 150 peddlers screamed all day long. It's a racket and would make an interesting editorial on how poor people have to live in a noise-infested place, with no relief, and try to work. Many have to sleep days and work nights. Can they?

They parade all day, especially on Saratoga, Princeton and Lexington streets, hawking all day and with no excuse for this unnecessary noise, as no one could possibly buy ice more than once a day and there are legitimate ice sellers who never scream their wares.

Also rag and fruit peddlers abound. Maybe you could help shame the proper authorities into doing something for our relief. We enlist your aid.

A Reader.

"CURIOUS LITTLE WAR"

Editor, Boston American:

In your edition of June 5, Mr. Edwin C. Hill, speaking of the "Human Side of the News," in referring to the war of the Gran Chaco, says: "The curious and sanguinary little war between Paraguay and Venezuela," etc.

In the first place, Venezuela, at several thousand miles distance from the Chaco, has nothing to do with the war between Bolivia and Paraguay.

Mr. Hill's geography is pretty bad, or else he does not know what he is talking about when he refers to a war between Paraguay and Bolivia, which war has nothing curious about it and is very sanguinary, as all wars are.

It is very common for American writers to show ignorance in the matters in which they deal, through lack of criticism in our papers, and it is very common for these writers to show their prejudice against matters pertaining to other countries.

LOST AIRLINER IS FOUND IN CATSKILLS

to land at the scene because of the rocky and hilly terrain, and set out for the Livingston Manor airport as soon as he had ascertained to his own satisfaction that he had found the charred and twisted wreckage of the ill-starred craft.

PLANE IN RUGGED REGION

The spot where the plane fell is in such a rugged region that the searchers were faced with the necessity of walking several miles from the nearest road to reach it.

The scene of the crash was estimated to be approximately 10 miles northeast of Livingston Manor proper.

SEES ONE BODY

Hallock, who returned to the scene in his plane soon after he landed to flash word of the discovery, said the craft was entirely destroyed.

"It was all burned," Harry Wells, attendant at the Livingston Manor airport, quoted him as saying.

"I saw it lying in a spot in the woods. One body was a short distance away from the plane and I guess the others were all inside the burned cabin."

Wells estimated it would take the coroner and the state trooper who hastened to the scene at least two hours to reach it. At 2 p. m. no one yet had seen the burned plane except Hallock.

Hallock flew back to the woods to guide the searchers and lend whatever aid possible.

NEWARK PLANES JOIN HUNT

At daybreak, nine planes took off from Newark field to join the hunt. All of them were equipped with radio and kept in constant contact with the grim searchers on land. All available National Guard planes were pushed into the search. Other planes raced down to the scene from Albany, Utica, Syracuse and Buffalo.

The plane took off from Newark at 5 p. m. Saturday. Not much later, it radioed "everything O. K." That was the last heard from it.

Dr. Howard F. Fleming, a physician, informed the commandant of the state police last night that on Saturday between 5:30 and 6 p. m., he was playing golf at Craigsmore near Ellinville. Suddenly, he said, a rainstorm and heavy fog descended and while he and his partner and their caddy rushed for shelter an airplane zoomed by, so close to the ground that the three men fell on their faces to avoid being struck.

The plane sped off to a dense woods between Sam's Point and Baer's Cliff in the Shawangunk Range and then—suddenly—the noise of the motor ceased. Dr. Fleming is convinced the ship crashed a minute or two after he and his companions heard it.

HEAD FOR SAM'S POINT

Schwab told the searchers he felt certain the ship had crashed on Sam's Point, and offered to lead a party to the spot where he felt the plane would have been most likely to strike. A group headed by Sergeants John Lockhart and J. J. Cummings of the state police attempted to penetrate the forest near Sam's Point shortly before midnight, but found it impossible to make any headway in the dark, and the hunt was delayed until sun-up.

Fliers consider the route only a shade less dangerous than the Newark-Cleveland route over the Alleghenies, which has long been known as the "Hell stretch."

Late yesterday and last night the army of searchers followed hundreds of clues concerning the plane's whereabouts, but none of them was considered as valuable as the information provided by Dr. Fleming, Schwab and the hermit woman.

Deep in the Catskills near Cairo, N. Y., the huge American Air liner was found with its crew of three and four passengers dead. The heavy dotted line shows the regular route. The solid black line shows the route the liner was taking. The wreckage was found at Beaver Kill, near Livingston Manor. The circle marks the area in which the major part of the search was conducted.

might have an opportunity to take his life before he could be cut down unless a constant watch was kept.

VISITS RESTRICTED

Jail officials today restricted the number of visits to each of the three prisoners to one a week. No particular day has been set for visits, however.

"I will attempt to have that ruling changed," said Frances Millen, sister of Murton and Irving, when she learned of it.

Jail officials also restored the daily exercise periods for the three prisoners. These recreation periods were cancelled three weeks ago after Irving Millen attempted to wrest a gun from one of his guards in attempted jail break.

Norma Brighton Millen, Murton's 19-year-old bride, was allowed her daily exercise period in the jail yard.

Attorney George Stanley Harvey, counsel for the Millens, announced today that he was preparing motions for a new trial based on the actions of the "howling mob" which hovered around the courthouse during the jury deliberations.

"There is no doubt that the jurors did hear the howling of the mob and infuriated expressions," Harvey said. "I maintain that their action constituted intimidation."

Norma has been despondent since the verdict of death was rendered by a jury in the Norfolk superior court, according to jail matrons.

MURTON TO TESTIFY

Murton will take the witness stand and testify in defense of his bride, it became known when her attorney, George A. Douglas, and George Stanley Harvey, attorney for the Millen brothers, visited their clients in the jail.

Attorney Douglas stated that one of Norma's witnesses would be her own mother, Mrs. Margaret Smith Brighton; her stepmother, the present Mrs. Norman Brighton; Rose Kneller, Faber's sweetheart, and Elsie Rosenbluth, fiancee of Saul Messinger, the latter the state's star witness against the trio.

Contrary to reports, Messinger has not returned to Coney Island, N. Y. He was at Winthrop Beach yesterday taking a dip with Miss Rosenbluth. Messinger will not be called as a witness for Norma, Douglas said. He will be called by the government, District Attorney Dewing said.

Distribution of the $20,000 reward offered by the state for apprehension and conviction of the Needham bank robbers will be delayed by the governor's council until the case has been finally disposed of in court, it was learned today at the State House.

The governor's council has received three applications for a share of the reward. One was made by Walter Mills, Needham salesman, who pointed out to state detectives that the bandit automobile battery had been repaired and that the work was of an unusual type. This information, he claims, gave police the first real clue in the case.

Dr. Bradford Talks at Mt. Holyoke

South Hadley, June 11—The solution of the many ills of life lies in the hearts and minds of student graduates, according to Dr. Arthur H. Bradford of Providence, who delivered the baccalaureate sermon at Mt. Holyoke college.

Graduates seeking the promised land of order and peace must themselves carry the "gold of good cheer" within themselves, Dr. Bradford declared.

Nazi Envoy Home Stoned in Cuba

Havana, June 11—A gang of hoodlums stoned the residence of the German minister to Cuba here, breaking several windows.

The stones were wrapped in papers upon which was printed: "We demand Thelman's freedom," signed by the Young Communists' League. Thelman was taken to mean Ernst Thaelmann, imprisoned German Communist leader.

WALSH IS OUT FOR COLE

sure a majority of the convention and nomination.

He said he would go along with Walsh because Walsh will be on the ticket, a candidate for re-election, and that he will have no immediate personal interest to be served.

RECOGNITION ASKED

Walsh discussed Cole as a perennial, unflinching Democrat worthy of recognition in "this time of almost certain victory." He said Cole had campaigned for Governor William E. Russell, more than a quarter of a century ago, and that he had successively supported Foss, himself, Governor Smith and Governor Ely.

Walsh is understood not to have indicated any enthusiastic interest when it was proposed that a woman should be nominated on the State ticket, preferably Dr. Helen I. Doherty or Mrs. Francis E. Slattery for State auditor.

The conferees failed to agree upon a choice for permanent chairman of the convention. Some suggestion was made that Mayor Robert Greenwood of Fitchburg, the foremost active candidate for the post, might not be able to keep a violent convention in control, because of lack of experience in such events.

CHAIRMAN DISCUSSED

Mayor Joseph P. Hurley of Fall River, Mayor John C. Mahoney of Worcester and Mayor Lawrence P. Quigley of Chelsea were among others discussed for the chairmanship.

The conferees accepted as bonafide the declaration by ex-Mayor James M. Curley that he will remain a candidate, even if defeated by the convention, and that he will contest the nominee in the September primaries. They accepted as certain that "Young Jim" Roosevelt will support Curley with all his energy. The hope of a definite alliance of harmony between the Roosevelt and the Walsh-Ely forces seemed to be abandoned.

Postmaster-General Farley will make a principle address to the delegates and guests at a great night-before banquet at the Bancroft Hotel in Worcester Wednesday night. Chairman Maynard will preside. James Roosevelt and Congressman Granfield of Springfield will be the other speakers.

Brent Escapes Plane Crash

Copyright, 1934, International News Service

Hollywood, Cal., June 11—Only a few know it, but Hollywood narrowly escaped being rocked by a second tragedy, even as it was mourning the death of Dorothy Dell in in a Pasadena motor car crash.

George Brent was scheduled to have been a passenger in an airplane that crashed on a hillside here Friday afternoon, killing both occupants.

The film actor recently completed a course in flying under the pilot, Robert T. Riddell, who was killed, and was to have gone up on the fatal flight. Only the fact that he was kept overtime on the "Stamboul Quest" set at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer prevented Brent from fulfilling his engagement.

Wilkins Plans New Arctic Trip in Sub

Plymouth, England, June 11 (AP)—Sir Hubert Wilkins, arriving today from New York, announced he would make a submarine exploration trip in 1935 to Spitsbergen and the Bering straits.

He will be accompanied by Lady Wilkins. Sir Hubert said 1500 miles of the trip would be made under Arctic ice. An order for a submarine has not yet been placed.

EUROPE EYES HITLER-DUCE MEETING

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND
(Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service, Inc.)

Berlin, June 11—All Europe was stirred by the forthcoming secret meeting between Chancellor Hitler and Premier Mussolini, the world's two most outstanding dictators, scheduled to take place probably Thursday at Venice or Riccioni.

Hitler is expected to fly to Venice from Munich, and Mussolini may fly there from Rome, though there is a possibility he may make the trip by automobile.

Deep secrecy is being maintained regarding the meeting, by both German and Italian official circles, but it was learned from a high source that actually all plans for the conference have been completed.

The first meeting of these two foes of Democratic institutions will be of dramatic interest and politically of overshadowing importance.

HITLER WISH FULFILLED

The contrast between the stocky aggressive Mussolini and the at first very shy Hitler, with a touch of inferiority complex about him, will be most marked. Hitler is the dreamer in politics; Mussolini the hard-boiled realist. Hitler comes to Mussolini, not Il Duce to Der Fuehrerm.

The initiative came from Berlin. Nor was it the first time that it was intimated to Mussolini that Hitler would like to be invited to meet him. Hitherto, Mussolini has been cool to the idea, not considering it politically expedient.

Then came the clash over Austria, with Mussolini going so far as to concentrate several army corps on the Italian-Austrian frontier, giving Berlin to understand that if Nazis from Germany crossed the Austrian border, Italian troops would march into Austria to support Dollfuss.

HOPE FOR AGREEMENT

Germany's flirting with Jugoslavia, Italy's potential enemy, further irritated Il Duce. Mussolini had some caustic things to say about Hitler's inability to control his subordinate leaders.

The return of Austria and Germany to the disarmament conference are believed to be two of the main subjects of the Mussolini-Hitler talk.

London, June 11—The Hohenzollerns are ready when Germany wants a monarchy, said the ex-kaiser in breaking his long silence in an interview with Randolph Churchill, Winston Churchill's son, published today in the Daily Mail.

Churchill writes that the gray woodchopper of Doorn seemed to show no regret over the downfall of his dynasty in talking across the luncheon table in his castle.

"The German people drove me out and if they want me back they will have to come and fetch me," the kaiser said.

AUTO RACKET EXPOSE LOOMS

A new expose of insurance claim frauds was expected by court attaches today as Mary G. Connor of College avenue, Somerville, 25-year-old secretary of John Brennan, Somerville lawyer, appeared before the Suffolk County Grand Jury.

The girl pleaded guilty to indictments charging fraud and uttering in connection with insurance claims before Superior Judge Edward Hanify last week.

Her visit to the grand jury room today came as a complete surprise. And on her way to and from the room, she was held strictly incommunicado.

Brennan attempted to speak to her on the way from the detention room to the grand jury chamber today, but was denied the privilege by court officers who were guarding the girl.

Immediately after she completed her testimony she was served with a writ of habeas corpus. She is to be questioned by Dunbar F. Carpenter, special commissioner appointed by the state supreme court to investigate insurance frauds.

Epstein Carving New Bust of Shaw

London, June 11 (INS)—Jacob Epstein, who came out of the lower East Side of New York to become one of the world's most talked of sculptors, is doing a bust of the world's most talked-of author George Bernard Shaw. Some of Epstein's works have raised as much controversy as Shaw's plays.

BLESSED RELIEF FOR FIERY PILES

Don't treat your piles with harsh patent medicines or so-called "pile-cures." Ask your druggist for a tube of Humphreys' Witch Hazel Pile Ointment, made by Humphreys' Medicine Company, whose Witch Hazel Pile Ointment and other remedies have been prized by the medical profession for over 50 years. Humphreys' Witch Hazel Pile Ointment gives blessed relief, quickly, to burning, bleeding, paining, itching, swelling, bulging piles and helps to prevent infection. It goes into the rectum softly and pleasantly with the applicator furnished with each tube. No fuss—no mess. Ask your druggist for Humphreys' Witch Hazel Pile Ointment and be sure you get Humphreys'. Tubes 50c, also in jars—50c.

She Hides, Speed Flash Camera Is on Job

Ruth Adams almost succeeded in hiding herself from the camera in Federal court today, but she wasn't fast enough to beat the speed-flash. She was snapped as he dodged behind a door. The 18-year-old girl was held in $200 bail on a charge of passing a bogus $10 bill in Chelsea for grand jury action. (Picture by Boston American Staff photographer.)

GIRL IS HELD IN BAD BILL CASE

Charged with passing a counterfeit $10 bill in Chelsea on May 15, Brookline avenue, Fenway, was released in $2000 bail today in federal court after being held for the grand jury.

She was accompanied by Mary A. Singleton of Brookline, who put up a $2000 bond for her release. A plea of not guilty was entered.

Miss Adams is alleged to have been prevailed upon to pass the counterfeit bill by Joseph A. Borecca, arrested by Secret Service Agent Alonzo Rice and police in Scollay square, Boston, who later escaped and was hailed in the rear of City Hall after several shots had been fired.

Lasell Honors 2 Working Girls

Two "working girls" today were honored as the highest ranking members of the graduating class of Lasell Junior College, Auburndale, at the commencement exercises of the school, held in Auburndale Congregational Church.

They were Isabel LaCrosse, of Williamstown, and Celia Kinsley, of Reading. They led their 75 classmates with general averages well above 90 per cent, and also distinguished themselves in various student activities. Both worked their way through school.

Principal speaker at the 79th annual commencement was Dr. Kirtley F. Mather, of Harvard. Benediction was pronounced by the Rev. Edward P. Drew. Prizes and diplomas were awarded by Dr. Guy M. Winslow, president of Lasell.

Elder French Amazed '400' as Cabby

Sold Overcoats While His Fortune Was Low

(This is the ninth in a series of articles setting forth some of the highlights in the history of America's oldest and most socially prominent families, soon to be united through the impending nuptials of John Jacob Astor, 3d, and Ellen Tuck French.)

By PEGGY DOYLE

Boston has a definite interest in the history of the French family, due to the wedding in June, 1930, of Francis Ormond French, father of the prospective bride of John Jacob Astor, 3d, who took as his wife Mrs. Mary Frances Clemeay Galvin divorced mate of Thomas F. Galvin, Jr., of Boston and Brookline.

His first wife, Mrs. Eleanor L. Burrill French, had divorced him in 1923 after nine years of marriage, receiving custody of their two daughters, Ellen Tuck and Virginia Middleton French, then aged 5 and 6 years.

Incidentally, however unconventional or spectacular may be the sudden development in the present romance involving the Astor and French families, the general conduct of Miss French's father provides a precedent unsurpassed in the history of the 400.

This spectacular blueblood astounded society throughout the East in 1923 by deciding to earn his living in some prosaic or ordinary manner. He became a taxi-cab driver in New York for a brief period and, subsequently, an overcoat salesman, after he had lost in Wall Street and love.

Unfortunately, the records indicate that most of his taxi-cab fares were sob-sisters and that nearly every time he fitted on a coat his client was a brilliant but shabby feature writer.

The naive attitude of Ellen Tuck French's father during this period was not only astounding—it was ducky. Once, when he was interviewed, he said:

"I feel that I must do something in the world. Honestly, boys, I have never been wealthy. Why, at no time have I had more than $500,000."

To the everlasting credit of four Western Union boys, let it be stated that they fanned the reporters who employed them back to consciousness.

The moment the reporters were revived they talked with a new gaiety to Francis Ormond French, realizing that here was a man who had never known trouble. The gist of their order to him was:

"Drive us anywhere, Mr. French, and don't spare the horses."

It is an unfortunate fact that Mr. French, undoubtedly well on his way to making a new fortune, gave up taxi-driving within three weeks. This was at the request of the company, due to the fact that, through the carelessness of photographers, half of Mr. French's passengers were blown out of their seats. His job as an overcoat salesman lasted seven days which, as any overcoat salesman will tell you, is plenty. He worked—or, pardon, he was employed by a clothing firm on Forty-fourth street, New York.

The $35 they paid him was immeasurably the best investment for publicity ever made by the firm of Jarndyce & Jarndyce.

Following this outburst of commercial energy, the father of Ellen Tuck French went into complete retreat for a period of seven years, until love came into his live in 1930 and he married Mrs. Galvin who had just obtained her final decree of divorce.

(Tomorrow's article will be concerned with the most exciting and publicized romance in the love of the French family's romantic antecedents—the love of Julia French for "Handsome Jack" Gerachty.)

USE ALL THE MAKE-UP YOU WISH, MY DEAR, BUT PLEASE LET US BREATHE! SAY THOUSANDS OF TINY PORES
When you remove cosmetics the Hollywood way, you guard against unattractive Cosmetic Skin . . .
POWDER and rouge every day? Skin delicate? Even then there's no need to worry about getting unattractive Cosmetic Skin.
Even though you may already have detected warning signals—tiny blemishes, enlarging pores, blackheads, perhaps—you can guard against this modern complexion trouble the Hollywood way.
Cosmetics Harmless if removed this way
Cosmetics need not harm even delicate skin unless they are allowed to choke the pores. Many women who think they are removing cosmetics thoroughly are actually leaving bits of stale make-up in the pores day after day.
Then, the pores become clogged, distended—Cosmetic Skin develops.
Lux Toilet Soap is made to remove cosmetics thoroughly. Its ACTIVE lather sinks deeply into the pores, carries away every vestige of dust, dirt, stale cosmetics. Before you apply fresh make-up—ALWAYS before you go to bed—remove stale make-up thoroughly with Lux Toilet Soap. Protect your skin—keep it lovely.

Lights and Shadows

Prolonged unexpectedly and happily by the coming of Katharine Cornell and an unusually good repertoire of Gilbert and Sullivan operettas, the theatrical season will call it quits officially Saturday night. The Shubert Theater, which started things moving last August with Joe Cook in "Hold Your Horses," will house the final performance of 1933-34. The final performance will be "Iolanthe," the political satire to music. William Danforth, Frank Moulan, Herbert and Allen Waterous, Vivian Hart, Vera Ross, Roy Cropper, Olga Schumacher, Dean Dickens and Frances Baviello are among the principals.

"Iolanthe" opens tonight and it will be played throughout the week. The engagement, under the management of S. M. Chartock, as been partly prosperous. If the weekly statements have called for a gill or so of red ink, the engagement nevertheless has been profitable in that Mr. Chartock's name has been established as that of an able entrepeneur of musical shows.

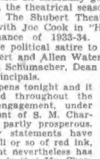
So, ave et vale, 1933-34 in the theater! Now to something about the summer. Everything about the summer, as far as that goes, and as far as it has been announced throughout New England. The extreme interest in the summer theater seems more pronounced this season than heretofore. In answer to the numerous correspondents who are eager for information, the following compilation should act as a guide. These programs have been arranged for Massachusetts.



Vivian Hart

At Dennis, Raymond Moore's Cape Playhouse, beginning July 2, for a season of 10 weeks, "The Pursuit of Happiness," with Harry Ellerbe; "Round Trip," a new play, by Blair Hall, with Ann Davis; "Double Door," with Mary Morris and Anne Revere; "Her Master's Voice," with Florence Reed; "Legend of Leonora," with Grace George; "Autumn Crocus," with Rollo Peters; "Big-Hearted Herbert," with J. C. Nugent. The weeks of August 6 and August 20 and the final week of the season have not yet been filled.

At Nantucket, Hetty Upthegrove's Nantucket Theatre, seven productions, two new plays among them, will be offered. The schedule has not been announced.

At Provincetown, Margaret Hewes' Wharf Theater. Ten plays will be produced, three of them, at least, new. The new ones are "A Lady Detained," by Samuel Shipman and John B. Hymer; "My Wife's Husband," by Isabelle Bishop, and "Pie In The Sky."

At Stockbridge, Robert Ross and Otis Shatfield – Taylor's Beach Theater, beginning July 2 for a season of nine weeks. "Art and Mrs. Bottle," with Jay Fassett, Cynthia Rogers and Richard Whorf; "Biography," "The Pursuit of Happiness," "The Second Man," "The Old Soak," and "Private Lives," and three new plays, "Power and Power," by Courtney Savage; "Hallowe'en," by Henry Myers, and "Hullabaloo."

The New Hampshire groups and their schedueh are as follows:

At Peterboro, Our Playhouse, Emile Belliveau and Alfred Kreymborg, directors. Beginning July 2 three performances a week for four weeks will be presented. The plays are "Savonarola Brown," "Puppet Plays," "Balloons" and "Strangers and Lovers," the last named a new one by Edwin Granberry.

At Tamworth, Francis G. Cleveland's The Barnstormers, Edward P. Goodnow, director. The plays scheduled are "The Shining Hour," "Her Master's Voice," "She Passed Through Lorraine," a new play, "Ten Minute Alibi," "Yellow Jack," "Serving Time for Henry," "The Pursuit of Happiness," "Nine Pine Street" and "The First Apple."

At Whitefield, Chase Farm Forty-Niners. Beginning July 13 eight revivals of old plays will be presented. They are: "Two Orphans," "A Texas Steer," "The Streets of New York," "Mary Tudor," "Oliver Twist," "Jim the Penman," "The Merry Monarch" and "Way Down East."

Two spots in Maine will have summer theatres. At Skowhegan, Melville Burke's Lakewood players. "The Shining Hour," with Leona Maricle opens tonight. A new play by Carroll and Garrott Graham, the brothers who wrote the novel, "Queer People," opens next Monday. "Sunshine Ahead" is the title. The season's schedule is not announced beyond that date.

Grace George

At Ogunquit, Walter Hartwig's Ogunquit playhouse will music the following plays in a 10 weeks' season starting July 2: "Her Master's Voice," with Daisy Atherton; "The Sacred Flame," "Twelfth Night," with Maude Adams; "The Closed Door," a new play, with Peggy Wood; "Loose Moments," also new, with Russell Gleason; "The Wind and the Rain," "Obsession," new, by Martine Berkeley; "Yellow Sands," and "His Favorite Wife," with Fay Marbe.

CARDINAL GIVES GRATITUDE FOR JUBILEE

His golden jubilee ended, William Cardinal O'Connell today resumed his daily routine of diocesan leadership with fond memories of the love and affection which thousands bestowed on him during the three-day celebration.

More than 30,000 men, women and children attended a majestic religious and civic ceremony in Fenway Park, climaxing the observance of the 50th anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood.

National, state and municipal dignitaries praised His Eminence as priest and man, and he was given a thunderous ovation when he arose at the conclusion of the mass to address those who gathered to pay him honor.

In gentle tones, Cardinal O'Connell spoke of his feelings after three days of felicitations.

"Such a spectacle as I see before me has brought so much joy to my heart that I am utterly at a loss to express it in mere words," he said.

"I have paid it all, however, this morning on the altar of God, and I have prayed to our eternal Father to make this anniversary the occasion of great harmony of hearts and minds, and a high sense of religious and patriotic loyalty.

"We are here together not merely to honor me. That would be too great and undeserved and unwarranted an honor on my part. I like to think we are gathered today for a great ideal—the union of hearts in God's own love and in the love of our dear America."

X-9ERS TO HAVE GALA DAY

Only five more days for members of the Secret Agent X-9 Club before they head out for the big free circus and field day at Norumbega Park.

Next Saturday is the date for the circus and field day and all members of the Secret Agent X-9 Club will be admitted free, if they show their badge and membership card at the gate.

This condition must be observed by all the thousands of boys and girls in the club, and, therefore, before you leave home on Saturday, be sure to have both your card and your badge with you.

There will be all kinds of fun at Norumbega, including clowns, wild animals, trick acts and all the rest that go to make up a big circus.

If you are not yet a member of the Secret Agent X-9 Club, just look on the comic page of this issue of the Boston Evening American, follow the directions and you may be able to get your credentials in time for the big party.

2 POLICE HURT IN ODD CRASH

While booking a speeder on the Worcester turnpike near the Newton-Brookline line, two Newton policemen were injured today when they were struck by a car in which the driver had lost control.

The injured officers, Patrolmen James J. Holley and Edward H. Maguire, were knocked down by their police car when an automobile operated by Urbain A. Lindo of Baker street, Shrewsbury, left the highway, crashed into the police auto and dropped over a 50-foot embankment. Lindo was uninjured. The officers were treated at Newton hospital for leg and back injuries.

French Hop for Montreal on Tour

Brooklyn, N. Y., June 11 (AP)—The French transatlantic fliers Lieutenant Paul Codos and Captain Maurice Rossi, took off from Floyd Bennett airport at 8:21 a. m., Eastern standard time, today for Montreal.

The two fliers, who arrived May 25 when forced to abandon their attempted non-stop flight from Paris to San Diego, have named Montreal as the first stop of a North American good will tour.

HOW WOMEN CAN WIN MEN AND MEN WIN

The Favor of Other Men

Unless two pints of bile juice flow daily from your liver into your bowels, your food decays in your bowels. This poisons your whole body. Movements get hard and constipated. You get yellow tongue, yellow skin, pimples, dull eyes, bad breath, bad taste, gas, dizziness, headache. You have become an unattractive, foul-smelling, sour-thinking person. You have lost your personal charm. Everybody wants to shun you.

If you don't take salts, mineral waters, pills, laxative pills, laxative candies or chewing gums and expect them to get rid of this poison that destroys your personal charm. They can't do it, for they only move out the tail end of your bowels and that doesn't take away enough of the decayed poison. Cosmetics won't help at all.

Only a free flow of your bile juice will stop this decay poison. Get your bile juice with one mild vegetable laxative which starts one pint to two pints of bile juice in Carter's Little Liver Pills. No calomel (mercury) in Carter's. Only 25c, mild vegetable extracts. If you would bring back your personal charm to win men, start taking Carter's Little Liver Pills according to directions today. 25c at drug stores.

Refuse "something just as good". For it may gripe, loosen teeth or scald rectum. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name and get what you ask for. © 1933, C. M. Co.

PINCHOT SEES LABOR TROUBLE

Averting strikes is President Roosevelt's big job, Governor Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania said today when he arrived unheralded at the East Boston Airport after a flight from Newark.

Governor Pinchot is on his way to Exeter Academy in New Hampshire to attend the 50th reunion of his class. He was met at the airport by Solon G. Warren of Boston, a friend.

Because of heavy fog, the plane was forced to circle the airport for more than 15 minutes before it could land.

Vienna Bombings Do Heavy Damage

Vienna, June 11 (INS)—Thirty bombings in the last 24 hours have caused vast property damage in the city and suburbs and reduced many of the inhabitants to a state of terror.

The police hoped today that they had put a stop to the outrages by the discovery of a veritable ammunition dump with 100 loaded bombs. One suspected Nazi was arrested.

able than humans, would not want to see the fight, much less give cocoanuts to see it.

A number of rich Americans, Mr. Horace Dodge, of Detroit, the latest, are reported to be taking their children to Europe, usually to England, "where they will be safe from kidnapers."

It is a fact that children in England, France, Germany, Italy and other European countries are safe from kidnapers because such countries enforce respect for law and do not have soft, sloppy parole boards, turning out murderers "to try life again," which usually means murder again.

In Fenian days Irish landlords spent their rent monies in London, impoverishing Ireland.

This government might prevent exportation of money by providing some sort of national park, guarded by United States troops protected by barbed wire entanglements in which prosperous parents could safely leave their young children.

In such sanctuaries, or oases of safety, the prosperous might be urged to "leave your children with Uncle Sam, and spend your money in America."

Justice in Pontiac, Michigan, is considering punishment for the father and mother of a boy and girl, six and four years old. On a Wednesday night, according to police, the children, left alone in the house, were frightened and told an older girl that their parents wanted her to stay with them to protect them.

That was a falsehood, according to the parents and they would not overlook so serious an offense. The next night, it is charged, the father went to a show and the mother to a party at a neighbor's house. Before leaving, it is alleged, they tied the little boy and girl to the bed, first having "taped their mouths in gangster fashion," their lips and jaws shut tight with tape crisscrossed over their mouths.

Fathers and mothers can imagine the pitiful terror of the two children, left bound and "taped." The parents are alleged to have said it was done to punish the children for telling a lie. What would you do to such parents? And what do you think of the alleged police statement that there is "no thought of taking the children permanently from the parents?"

BOSTON AMERICAN

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON, MONDAY, JUNE 11, 1934

This Is Life
ROBERT E. ROGERS

Because Cardinal O'Connell wished it, his autobiography, "Recollections of Seventy Years," did not appear as a part of the Jubilee celebration but only after the ceremonies had been held. Today it is released by Houghton Mifflin Co., bound sumptuously in scarlet with the Cardinal's arms in gold, with the motto, "Vigor Per Ardua"—Energy Through Difficulties, a fitting motto for the poor little Irish boy of more than seventy years ago who became, while still a young man, Boston's first Prince of the Church.

Robert E. Rogers

The same disarming modesty which refused to use his Jubilee for advertising his book led the author to explain why he wrote it at all. To Cardinal O'Connell his book is chiefly a part of the history of the Church in America. He regrets that older prelates, men like Gibbons and McCloskey, left so little behind them in the way of records or personal accounts of the days in which the Church began to advance to its present status.

"The growth has been from small, indeed quite insignificant beginnings, by what constitutes an almost fabulous increase, to the status and prestige of the Catholic Church today . . . That was one of the main reasons which prompted me to write this book. I feel that I am simply doing a duty to those who come after me, who at least will know my own point of view and the authentic construction which I put on the principal events of my life."

There is no need for a reviewer here to rehearse the events of Card nal O'Connell's life. That story has been told and retold over and over again during the past few days. It is the story of the immemorial democracy of the Catholic Church by which the poorest boy, if he have but a vocation, brains, ability, and devotion, may rise to the highest places of authority and influence.

It was William O'Connell's good fortune to be selected, from among his fellows, to be educated in Rome and, once there, to earn the favorable consideration of the Pope and the Curia. He did his foundation work there in the American College; he completed his education in Boston; he did his spade work as priest in Greater Boston parishes. The turn in his career came when he was summoned back to Rome as the rector of the American College.

From that moment he earned, one after another, the steps by which he climbed, as a result of the impression he made upon Leo XIII and Pius X. What those impressions were can be clearly seen from the tasks at which he was set. Gubernatorial and administrative ability necessary for a college rector, bishop of a diocese and coadjutor of a great archdiocese; diplomatic ability, ability to make friends with the great ones of the earth, to steer the dangerous and delicate courses of diplomacy, as seen in his interesting and successful mission to the Mikado of Japan in 1905; and, finally, the successful control of the archepiscopacy itself, which made the Cardinalate merely the latest and inevitable step in honors and responsibility.

You may read for yourself—and you should, because of its human interest and its lessons for the moulding of a career—the details which the Cardinal gives, quietly and with frequent understatement, to show why he moved so strongly from one position of responsibility and labor to another. For this is the story of a life of great power but of even greater detail. The chapter on the rehabilitation of the finances and the administration of the See of Boston is historically, of the greatest importance.

The gift of friendship, the gift of binding to him with bands of admiration and affection people of the highest importance and of the richest nature is obvious throughout the book, from the pages where he recounts his boyhood friendships, the anecdotes of his American Protestant friends in Rome—the house where the chair was kept sacred for the Cardinal-to-be—the impression he made upon the puncilious Japanese, up to those remarkable pages near the end in which he writes with deep feeling and illuminating understanding of his adored Leo XIII and Pius X, of Benedict the Pope of the Great War, and of the present pontiff. And between the lines one can read much of the difficulties of an American churchman in the Roman curia, even something of how little, really, even today, Rome understands the American church. Hereafter the papal elections will be postponed until the American cardinals can arrive in Rome. That, which Cardinal O'Connell brought about, may be a small earnest of what needs to come.

To me as a teacher and a Yankee of the old block the most interesting chapters were three which told of the boy's education, with a thoroughness which one suspects unfortunately, may be lacking in our public schools of today, and also the writer's clear-cut, intense, and often indignant reflections upon the position of the poor Irish Catholic immigrant population, in the Lowell of 75 years ago.

Those early chapters constitute a very important document in our New England cultural history. No one, so far as I know, has spoken out so uncompromisingly, so sternly, and so constructively as has the Cardinal in these early pages.

I have no space to say more. The book is hand-hewn. There is nothing literary about it. It is alive, like a man talking. It is honest, yet modest, courteous but often blunt, strongly personal and even sentimental in places, devoutly religious yet everywhere practical, the story of a man shrewd, laborious, magnificently competent in the work to which he was called. His vocation has been that of a churchman; his accomplishment in that field has been historic. But in closing the book one feels that William Cardinal O'Connell would have been a very considerable success in any kind of work that might have come to him to do.

'HANFY' COMING DESPITE PROTEST

LABOR JOINS IN A BATTLE FOR PARI-MUTUEL

Jobs Seen in Passage of Legal Bets Bill; May Cut Taxes

Organized labor will join hands with gentlemen sportsmen and prominent members of the Legislature in urging a favorable report on the bill to legalize pari-mutuel betting on horse and dog races, with a referendum by counties, at a big hearing before the Senate ways and means committee Wednesday.

Many of the unions it was revealed today have gone on record for the bill in the belief its enacting to a high place through the building of race tracks and that the revenue received will tend to lessen taxes.

Sportsmen and cattle raisers see in the revival of the "sport of kings" a stimulus to the breeding of horses and the elevation of racing to a high lain through the elimination of such rackets as the "nigger pool."

OPPN MINDS' ON BILL

While members of the Senate ways and means committee decline to state their opinions, it is believed the bill has a chance of being reported favorably.

For instance, Senator Donald W. Nicholson, of Wareham, usually very frank and determined on bills requiring his vote in the committee, stated today that although he will fight vigorously against the Sullivan state lottery referendum, he has an open mind on the horse and dog racing measure.

Nicholson is one of five members of the committee.

Arguments on the lottery bill were heard by the committee on May 22 but it has been held by the committee for the purpose of reporting on the two bills at the same time.

ELY'S VIEWS UNKNOWN

The attitude that Governor Ely will take on the horse and dog measure, it is understood, will determine, in the last analysis, whether it will reach the voters. The Governor has publicly expressed himself as against some of the "gambling" legislation but has not specified horse and racing.

Sponsors for both the lottery bill and the horse and dog referendum are claiming the great bulk of the voters desire the legalization of both and want the chance of recording their wishes.

ALCOHOL RING IS HUNTED HERE

Roused by the brazenness of a "foreign rum ring" smuggling bootleg alcohol from Russia into Boston, to be sold to small druggists at a price lower than the legitimate licensed product, government agents are active checking up on the distributing points.

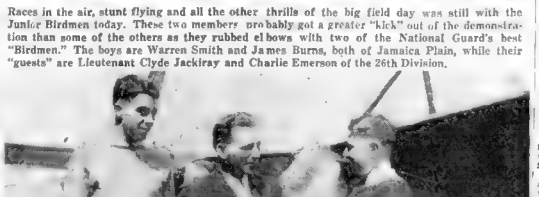
Information in the hands of the authorities deal with the shipment of 50-gallon drums to points in and about Boston, where it is distributed in three and five-gallon tin cans in camouflaged trucks.

Agents of the Alcoholic Beverage Unit of New England and customs inspectors are seeking to learn the ports of vessels contacting Russian steamers at sea and have linked three alleged members of a foreign rum ring interested in splitting the alcohol at two plants not far from Boston.

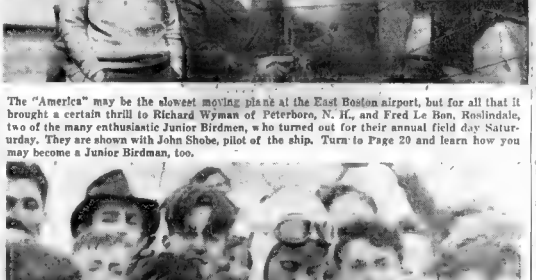
Air Aces Thrill Junior Birdmen at Festival

The "Sky Devils," Cambridge squadron of Junior Birdmen, under the command of Mark McLoughlin, were among the enthusiastic youngsters who turned out for the New England Air Festival at the airport Saturday.

Races in the air, stunt flying and all the other thrills of the big field day was still with the Junior Birdmen today. These two members probably got a greater "kick" out of the demonstration than some of the others as they rubbed elbows with two of the National Guard's best "Birdmen." The boys are Warren Smith and James Burns, both of Jamaica Plain, while their "guests" are Lieutenant Clyde Jackiray and Charlie Emerson of the 26th Division.



The "America" may be the slowest moving plane at the East Boston airport, but for all that it brought a certain thrill to Richard Wyman of Peterboro, N. H., and Fred Le Bon, Roslindale, two of the many enthusiastic Junior Birdmen, who turned out for their annual field day Saturday. They are shown with John Shobe, pilot of the ship. Turn to Page 20 and learn how you may become a Junior Birdman, too.



Mrs. "Teddy" Kenyon of Newton, "queen of the air" and winner of the best sportsman pilot flight in the New York air pageant last year, thrilled the Junior Birdmen at the New England Air Festival at the Boston Municipal Airport, East Boston. When Mrs. Kenyon landed, she was besieged by a score of Birdmen who wanted her autograph and here she is busily autographing books and papers.

AID OF HITLER LEAVES FOR REUNION

Carries Hindenburg's Bust as a Gift to West Point

Hanfstaengel, one of Hitler's closest friends in the United States, sailed for Germany today to attend the 25th reunion of his class at Harvard, which he left in 1909, and to attend the college commencement festivities.

Just how Hanfstaengel would be received by Hitler upon his return to Germany was a matter of speculation today, and while the Nazi leader offered personally to pay Hanfstaengel's passage to Germany for a year, today decided to join those here next week in protesting.

While the undertaking will take the personal presidence of Hanfstaengel's presence at the commencement festivities, a Harvard official said today, it is likely that the State Department may order a special guard for the Hitler lieutenant.

RIDES WITH BAGGAGE

Early this morning, according to advices from Cologne, the son of the famed German art publisher took French leave from Germany. Without any announcement whatever, "Putzy" as he was called as an undergraduate, arrived in the Rhine city on the Berlin mail-express.

He immediately boarded the North German Lloyd mail plane for Cherbourg, which landed him alongside the Europa four hours before the gangplank was raised.

Hanfstaengel was obliged to stow himself into the baggage along with the mail sacks and his baggage, which is reported to include a bust of Germany's warrio President, Paul von Hindenburg which he intends to present to the United States Military Academy at West Point.

Whether Hanfstaengel's baggage included the famous film explaining the origin and the activities of the Hitler movement could not be learned. However, he promises to bring this picture that raised a storm of protest when he first accepted the invitation to officiate at his class reunion.

The five-and-a-half-day express liner was to pull at 6:30 p. m. It is due in New York Saturday afternoon.

REACTION VARIES

News of Hanfstaengel's latest move brought forth widely varying reactions at Harvard Officially, it was said that the man will be welcomed like every other member of his class.

Many undergraduates shared these views, but those who were responsible for the original protest are expected to renew them.

There is a possibility that Hanfstaengel's $1000 offer to Harvard will be considered by the corporation at a meeting today. No action will be taken, however, because University Hall is not certain whether the check is to be considered as part of his class fund or a direct gift to the school.

Neck Pierced by Auto Fan Blade

Struck in the neck by the blade of an auto fan he had rigged as a cooling device, Ernest Hussey, 24, 101 Pine Grove avenue, Lynn, was in critical condition today at the Lynn hospital where the blade was removed from Hussey's neck after a delicate operation.

Hussey is an electrician and an inventor, police said.

Laboring until late and through town, the only change being a mighty plethora of sidewalk and back yard cafes, gaily umbrellaed. Put in a moment to see Laura Cobb and back to my chambers, where came Minnie C. Vesey, Lucy Virginia Long and Floyd Gibbons, too, to display his new dental work.

Dinner with Hattie Bell Johnston against her sailing for Italy and driving her home saw couples dancing at a Child's in 59th street. And coming upon Lowell Thomas, who lectured recently in my home town. So reading her play, "Victoria," which Kathleen Norris sent, bravely writ, until 3 a. m.

Manhattan wears its most important manner between 8 and 10 a. m. Steps are braver the bravado more blatant. A gardenseed, spatted Grover Whalen hirpling in a Maud S. trot across 42d street is symbolic of the tempo. In the park, nurse-maids are out with their freshly shining rosebuds. Children jog in pony carts with pompons and bells. Restaurants are dinny with breakfast clatter, shoppers eagerly bright with bargain hopes, and taxi drivers are not yet worn to a collective snarl. This to-ch and go langu shes around noon and is not revived until theater time.

Then, the chorus and cabaret girls who file across town at 7 p. m. Pert, rouged, buoyant. It is their morning and they give vibrancy to a dying day. I smiled in a blurty way at one this evening as she ran lightly down steps of a rooming house in West 48th. She smiled back naturally but after a few steps hesitated as though sensing a ready dinner buyer. Better judgment saved the situation and she hastened on. But some day, I imagine, with times as they are, I'll grin my fool self smack into a dinner check.

Personal nomination for New York's most striking feminine profile—that of Mrs. Sidney R. Kent.

Among the regrets of being absent from New York for a season was missing Caroline Miller, whose fine novel deservedly won the Pulitzer prize. It was her first visit to New York and she had expressed desire to her publisher for a meeting solely because her knowledge of Manhattan and its people came from reading down in deep Georgia the column. I was anxious to know if the mental picture had a degree of accuracy. My canvas of New York before coming here was acquired from a more accomplished delineator—O. Henry. And so deft were his strokes that Madison Square, sections of the Bowery and a certain hotel in the 20's were precisely as I visualized.

Paris, in mental photograph, was caught from a boyhood reading of Dickens' "The Tale of Two Cities." I saw it a cobblestoned affair with many low wine-shops, mustached concierges, shave pated children in black frocks and priests with button noses and wide, fishcase hats. So dour was the picture I went to London many times without crossing the channel. And when I did, the sharp contrast may be why I think Paris of a few years ago the most stimulating city on the other side.

GIRL IN THE FAMILY -:- A Choice Between Marriage for Love or Loyalty -:- By Beatrice Burton

Susan Discovers Several Things Concerning Family of Allen Sholes

CHAPTER XXI

"When's Wallace coming back to town?"

"In about ten days. I had a letter from him this morning, Allen." Ten days, and she would have to face Wallace. Have to tell him that she had made a mistake about her feelings toward him and give him back his ring and his watch bracelet . . . and the knowledge that she was hurting and humiliating him would hurt her, too. The thought of it worried her more now than the anticipation of the storm that would break over her head when she told the family that she had broken her engagement.

"You'll tell him everything just as soon as you see him, won't you, Susan?" She could feel the intentness of Allen's eyes on her as she spoke, and her own eyes veered away and fixed themselves on the nearest window where the darkness was thickening behind the pane.

"Of course I will—only it's going to be a terribly hard thing to do."

"But you'll do it?" His hands reached out across the white cloth and gripped both of hers hard. "Just as soon as you can?"

"I'll have to, Allen. I'm going to. But it's not going to be easy."

"What is the matter with you, Susan? Getting cold feet? Still a little bit crazy about that guy? Be honest with me."

I'm trying to be honest, Allen. You know I don't care anything at all about Wallace. You must know it—but it's not going to be easy to give him back his ring. I don't like to hurt anyone. And then there's my family—I wish they didn't have to know about it. They're going to take all this very badly. They're all so pleased about my engagement. They fell as if I'm marrying the kind of a man that I probably would have married if they hadn't lost all their money. Not that Wallace has much money, for he hasn't. But his people have a lot, and my people think that that is perfectly fully important—particularly just now when they're so poor themselves.

TO WED AT ONCE

"It's going to be just plain awful to live with them after they know about you and me," she finished.

"That's absurd, Susan." Allen's voice was sharp, and it sounded as if he were out of patience with her.

"Absurd?" she repeated. He didn't know how Uncle Worthy could poison a whole day by his sarcasm, as he often had, and how Lottie could talk on and on about the possibilities of Susan's becoming an old maid, as she often had talked during the months before Wallace's proposal. "It wouldn't be so bad if I had a job and could be out of the house all day, or if I could marry out right away and walk out—"

His hands pressed hers. "That's an idea. Why don't you do it?" His face lighted up. "Would you, Susan?"

"I'm like Garibaldi, I'm afraid," he went on after a pause, "when he told his soldiers he would shoot them nothing but cold and hunger and misery if they went on with him—I can't offer you anything, Susan, for a while I haven't enough money for anything but a room in a boarding house over here and three meals a day. Pretty slim ones, too, I imagine, while I'm spending so much on that law course of mine. How about it?"

Susan hesitated. She had a mortal longing to say, "Yes," to marry Allen at once and go to live with him in a cheap room somewhere. The vision of such a place flashed through her mind—badly furnished, small, with trunks shoved under the bed and a gas ring on a shelf for the making of coffee, bags of sugar and buns on a closet hook, and over everything the patina of poverty. But it would be lovely—

I could pass by the law course, as far as that goes," Allen said suddenly, and as he spoke Susan made her decision. "There we'd be sure to have enough money."

"No." Susan was emphatic. "I wouldn't think of letting you do that when you're as close to your bar exams as you are—Why, you'd be just a courtroom clerk the rest of your life if you stopped going to law school now! I'll stay on at home until we can get married the right way. My people will simply have to realize that I have a life of my own that they mustn't try to interfere with. After all, I'm not a child who has to obey everything they tell me to do."

What did those words remind her of, she wondered. They had once she knew. John had told her something of the sort at Cullen's on Christmas day when aunt Zidna had sent for her to come home to take Wallace's telephone call.

"You'll have to grow up some time or other, Susie," John had said, "and learn how to make things in your own way instead of letting the family do all your thinking for you."

He had been absolutely right, too, for the time had come already when she would have to stand up under the family's disapproval of her jilting of Wallace. She was going to have to think for herself instead of letting them think for her as they always had done.

"DISSUADING WALLACE"

"They'll say that it's nothing less than criminal, to break my engagement after it's been announced in the newspapers," she said, thinking things out. "They'll tell me that I'm publicly disgracing Wallace, and I suppose that's what I shall be doing, as a matter of fact —but that's Aunt Edna's fault because she announced the engagement without saying a word to me about it."

"Why don't you find something to do and get out of the house part of the time?" Allen asked. "I should think you'd enjoy it Susan. I've often wondered why you didn't."

"Well, I have, too," said Susan. "I've wanted to for years, but they've always been dead set against it. They seemed to think I'd lose caste if I turned into a working girl. They're very old-fashioned about things like that. They've never been out in the world much—and now I couldn't go out and get a position because they really need me at home. They can't afford to keep Anna any longer, and I'm going to have to take over her work from now on."

The waiter came to take away the coffee service and the untouched toast, cold now with the butter and cinnamon and sugar standing up in little ridges on it.

"Well, I've been going around with Wallace for a long time, and my father always pointed out to me that, if I married him, I wouldn't have any use for a knowledge of office work. That was true, of course."

"How long have you known that bird?"

"Almost two years."

"And you're sure you weren't in love with him any of that time, Susan?

MY IDEA ABOUT LOVE

"No, I never felt sure of myself with him. I mean that I always had a suspicion that love was a great deal stronger and more thrilling than anything I felt for him. I didn't like to let him kiss me, and he knew it. He told me, just the night when he went away, that I was a very chilly sort of person."

"But you would have married him if it hadn't been for last night, wouldn't you?"

Susan's shoulders went up in a shrug. "I suppose so," she answered truthfully. "I'd reached the point where I thought I could not stand living at home a day longer. And then I was flattered by his liking me, and I knew he'd be what's known as a good husband. You've heard of girls marrying for a home, haven't you?"

MY IDEA ABOUT LOVE

"Well, that's what I was going to do, I think. But now I wouldn't marry him if he owned the best house in town and a camp in the Adirondacks and a Palm Beach houseboat! I'll tell him so, too, when he comes home, but I'll have to do it in my own way, Allen. You'll have to let me tell the family about it at my own time—when Wallace is really out of the picture."

"You talk like a child, Susan. They can't make you marry a man if you don't want to." Allen jerked his chair back with an impatient movement and got up. "The good old days when girls were under their elders' thumbs have been gone for a long time."

"I know that just as well as you do." Susan tried to defend herself. "But if I let Wallace go and they find out about it they'll just be terribly disagreeable about it and they'll try to get him back probably. They'll tell him I don't know my own mind or something like that."

"If you let Wallace go! That's good," said Allen, plainly angry now as he walked out of the dining room beside her.

"When I let him go." Susan corrected herself quickly. "Please don't doubt me like this, Allen."

They walked home slowly, arm in arm, their shoulders touching as they moved. But something—his doubt of her—had come between them.

"Tell me about yourself, Allen," she said as they walked along out of the hum and the lights of the downtown district into the dark residential streets of the North Side. "Not about your job, but about you—when you were a little boy out west, and where you went to school, and so on."

"I didn't live out in New Mexico when I was a kid," he answered. "I lived on Center street about ten blocks from your house. My mother had a shop there where she sewed for people—"

MOTHER DRESSMAKER

"Well, then, my aunts remember her!" Susan exclaimed, breaking in upon him. "When you first came to live with us they said they remembered a Mrs. Sholes who had been a dressmaker in our neighborhood years ago. And Uncle Worthy remembered that she moved away."

Allen nodded his head, his eyes straight ahead of him as if he were thinking of something that took him far away from Susan.

"That was when she was first taken sick," he said presently. "She had lung trouble. First we went up to Saranac and a year afterward we went out to New Mexico to live.

"Last Fall she died," he continued after a second's pause. "We never cared much for the west, she and I. And as soon as she was gone, I couldn't stand it. So I came back here. I have some friends here, and I'd always thought of this town—this neighborhood, in particular—as home, somehow." If a grown man set feet sill and proportionately broad of shoulder can be called wistful, Allen was wistful then.

"Do any of your family live here?" Susan asked, thinking of the aunts who welcome he had received at the house in Center street—the part of town that he had always thought of as home.

"No. My father and mother separated when I was about six years old. He lives out in Oregon some where. I never hear from him."

(John surprises Susan by announcing he has offer of a job as a sport writer and hopes to marry Connie.)

Scented Sun Oil Pleases

TO AVOID that terrifying lobster stage while acquiring an alluring sun tan, toast yourself gradually with the protection of a delightfully scented sun oil. You can give grease yourself to your heart's content and achieve that gloriously smooth look that Clara Lou Sheridan has captured, without looking as if you were oiled to swim Boston Light.

Rich, Creamy Tan Is Fashion's Decree for 1934 Beach Girl

By Juliet Shelby

IF YOU have decided to change the color of your skin for the Summer months, then a word or two of advice. This season our smart lady of the beach is to be a rich, creamy tan. Dark, squaw-like browns are definitely taboo at last, unless you have a dark brunette skin.

Too many women discovered, after egotizing sun baths, that their skins were toughened and discolored by long exposures to the sun. It took time and patience to erase the wrinkles that appeared, and to turn back the natural oils and color of the skin.

So toast yourself, gradually, well protected by a sun oil, to a beautiful cafe au lait, and not a shade darker if you can help it.

And if you want to enjoy your first days on the beach you will begin getting your tan at home on the roof, in the solarium or on the grass. Never expose your entire body at once. Tan your legs one day, your back and arms another day—without strap interference. Then throw back your chin and turn your under arms toward the sun so they will get the same even coloring.

But always—and please remember this—keep your breasts covered and protect your eyes with pads of absorbent cotton dipped first in water and then in witch-hazel. If you will follow these suggestions you will skip that terrifying lobster stage!

Of course, never face the sun without first using a sun oil. I can give you the name of one that all the pampered darlings of Palm Beach swear by. Its consistency is gloriously smooth—pure, rich oils blended with a new element that protects the natural oils of the skin. You acquire a divine skin tone the second time you use it and its delightful odor adds considerably to the pleasure of using it.

Even after you are a glowing beige, always carry a bottle of this fragrant oil in your beach bag. Use a bit before you take a swim and a bit more when you come out of the water. You can use it without looking as if you were greased to swim the English Channel, and that's something to brag about.

If you would like to learn the name of the oil and where it may be purchased, telephone to Juliet Shelby, Lib 4000. If you prefer writing for this information, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Miss Juliet Shelby, Boston American

This is the time of the year to make that change that you have desired so long but we will find the choicest apartments, homes, and rooms listed today and every day in the rental columns of the American and Advertiser.

Salt Rub for the Skin

Question: I have a long, very thin face and my complexion is very yellow. Will you please tell me what will make my face fuller and improve the appearance of my skin?

M. H. Hyde Park.

Answer: A sallow skin is usually the result of poor circulation. Practice deep breathing every day. Take long walks, take up some form of outdoor sports. Bathe daily, followed by a cool shower and a brisk rub with a coarse towel to bring up the blood. An occasional salt rub is good. Occasional use of a liquid stimulant or circulation ointment helps bring the blood to the skin cells and clears the skin. Use after a cleansing cream.

Massage your face with toilet lanolin or cocoa butter to add more flesh. Use an upward movement. Careful hair arrangement will make your face appear wider and fuller. Train a few curls or bangs over your fore head.

Acne Scars

Question: Some years ago I suffered from a severe case of acne. At present I am thoroughly cured but the unsightly scars still remain. Can you suggest an inexpensive method of concealing blemishes?

M. K., Newton.

Answer: Scars from acne gradually disappear in many cases, or at least become less noticeable. You can help conceal them by using a liquid powder foundation and face powder that are a darker shade than your skin. It will be better, too, because the effect is always more natural. If your skin is dry, you should use plenty of lubricating cream for cleansing and nourishing. Use soap and water about twice weekly, cleansing cream every night followed by an astringent, giving special attention to the large pores. Cold water will help to close them, too. At bedtime apply nourishing cream and leave on all but the porous parts.

ALL-STAR STAFF TO COVER FIGHT FOR AMERICAN

A sparkling array of famous star writers will be at the ring side of the Carnera-Baer battle Thursday night to bring a graphic world picture of the championship test to readers of the Boston Evening American.

Heading the list will be JACK CONWAY, one of the foremost fight authorities in the country, who will detail the blow by blow description of the battle and describe the action which may result in the crowning of a new heavyweight king in the realm of Pistiana.

AUSTEN LAKE, the brilliant columnist of the Boston Evening American, will give his impressions of the highlights and human interest angles of the fray

DAMON RUNYON, one of the greatest sports commentators in the nation, will write his impressions of the fight exclusively for this paper.

Runyon and Conway are already on the battleground, and Lake will follow immediately.

BILL CORUM, the famous sports columnist; BENNY LEONARD, former lightweight champion; GENE FOWLER, well-known novelist, and BUGS BAER, nationally known humorist, will also give their views of the battle for the Boston Evening American readers.

And to augment these features will be exclusive stories of the fight by the participants themselves—PRIMO CARNERA, the champion, and MAX BAER, the man who would be king.

Incidentally, a series of articles by the champion and challenger is starting today on these pages

A staff of photographers will also "cover" the shindig to give Boston Evening American fans the first and best pictures of the battle.

If you can't get to the scene of the battle yourself, be sure and have a ringside seat through the columns of the Boston Evening American. It will be the most complete sport coverage of any paper in this city.

Bill Grimes Compares Sox, Tiger Outfields Of 1914 and 1934

Patrick-Patrick Pass Will Send Jackson To New York Rangers

By BILL GRIMES

Pinch-Hitting for Austen Lake

In order to divert my attention from falling or jumping out of that sky ride Detroit press box, during my recent visit to that fair city with the Men of Harris, I made a mental comparison of the 1914 and the 1934 Red Sox and Tigers.

I was assigned to a seat in the second row of the Detroit crow's nest, which is some 116 feet up from and almost directly over home plate. From my point of vantage, I could, by stretching my neck almost to the breaking point, see the front of the pitcher's box.

I didn't see a batter during the game I was supposed to expert on from the press coop, acquiring my information as to their success or failure only by watching the score board.

The pitchers wound up and let fly at the spot where I figured the batters were standing. If I did not hear any crack of the bat, I glanced quickly at the score board to see what had happened. The happenings were so unanimously against the Sox that I lost interest in what was going on below me and started to dream of the good old days.

Twenty years had clicked off since I had been in the Fluvver City with a Red Sox team. Leaning back in my chair, to offset any possibility of doing a nose dive out of that dizzy coop, I started to make a comparison of the present day outfield, which was about the only department visible, and that of a score of years ago.

School Boys Compared to Old-Timers

On my last baseball trip to Detroit, Duffy Lewis was in left, Tris Speaker in centre and Harry Hooper in right for the Red Sox, while Detroit had Bobby Veach, Ty Cobb and Sam Crawford.

As the present day outfielders go or come, Roy Johnson, Carl Reynolds, Dusty Cooke, "Goose" Goslin, Jo-Jo White and Pete Fox may enjoy more than passable reputations with their employes and the fans but they could not carry Lewis', Speaker's, Hooper's, Veach's, Cobb's or Crawford's gloves into any park.

And I didn't see any Heine Wagners or Donie Bushes.

Blood is thicker than water, as Manager Jack Adams of the Detroit Red Wings recently discovered. Smiling Jack was of the opinion that he had just about closed a deal whereby Percy Jackson, the Bruin Cubs goalie, would join his puck-chasing aggregation. Then came the shift in personnel directors of the Bruins, which made Frank Patrick the big boss and last word as regards hockey that pertains to the Boston Club.

It seems that Brother Lester is not satisfied with Andy Aitkenhead as a goal minder and that the master mind of the New York Rangers leans strongly toward Jackson, which means that Smiling Jack is left out on another limb, for if Brother Lester wants Jackson, Jackson will go to the Rangers.

Because of that Patrick to Patrick pass, Detroit probably will wind up with Andy Aitkenhead in the nets The former Springfield Indians' goal guardian is one of the best, despite the fact that Lester Patrick put the thumbs down on him.

Speaking of hockey—it may not be an interesting subject at this season of the year but it is at least a cooling thought—the St. Louis Arena is one of the best on the Calder loop. It seats 15,750, and its construction is similar to the Maple Leaf Gardens and the Montreal Forum. There are no balconies or posts, but facilities for parking cars in six heated garages, which are adjacent to the Arena, besides an outside area which will accommodate more cars than they can get people in the rink.

Between the time that she won her first Bay State championship at Brae Burn in 1931 and her recent success at Winchester, Rosamond "Pinkie" Vahey improved her game noticeably in every department. "Pinkie" has added many yards to her drives and shots through the fairways, is a better competitor and is no longer handicapped by the jitters. During the championship at Brae Burn, she pulled the brims off no less than three felt hats, but at Winchester she never even once reached for her chapeau.

Much has been and still is being written concerning the blanket finish of the U. S. open championship at Merion, but don't let anyone tell you that it compares, for a second, with that affair staged at the Worcester Country Club a few years ago when Bobby Jones and Willie Macfarlane tied and played off for the title

Jack Onslow, Red Sox coach, will never be able to adjust himself to the present day type of baseball—giving the runners the inside corners of the bags on long hits, etc.

Jack tells a story about a mix-up he had with his brother Eddie, who was a real pop off. They were in the International League, Jack with Baltimore and Eddie with Toronto. The game was played in the Queen City. The Onslow brothers spent the morning together, lunched together and fanned in the stands before donning uniforms.

They Played Ball in Them Thar Days

About the 7th inning, Eddie was on third, with none out Jack was doing the catching. The batter smashed one at the Oriole shortstop, who played the ball home, as Eddie was trying to score with the tying run.

Jack took the throw. He sat himself at the plate, and, when Brother Eddie came into him, there was a crash. Eddie and Jack hit the dirt. Just as the umpire declared Eddie out, Jack felt something hit him back of the ear and discovered that Eddie had kicked him and at the same time was yelling, "Don't you ever block me like that, you so and so."

Those were the days when they played baseball, instead of working at it like a business.

Primo, Max Turn Author Both Confident of Victory

'I'm the Next Champ,' Says California Belligerent

By Max Baer

Copyright 1934 King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Asbury Park, N. J., June 11—Everybody who has seen me work out for my fight with Primo Carnera tells the neighbors I look horrible. That's okay. I always look poor in training—always will—because I train to beat the particular man I'm to tackle next. I don't train just to look fancy

When I was tuning up for Max Schmeling, they also said I looked terrible; that I was as wide open as the Grand Canyon and that I ought to be in burlesque.

But when it came fight time I didn't look so bad. I looked good—extra special good, if you ask me.

Carnera is something different If I used the same tactics against him as I did against Schmeling, Schaaf and the others, it wouldn't get me anywhere in particular. I know plenty about our great, big darling champion

Maybe you saw us heaving punches at each other in the "Prize Fighter and the Lady." That's all we did—just heave.

HARRIS LIKE CARNERA

Every time we got ready to trade Carnera's manager, Sorcel, would warn me that if I let loose just once I never would get a chance at the title

So I had to be very nice and sweet with our darling and just swing. But I paid plenty of attention to his style, and I learned the way I have to fight him to belt him to sleep.

Our darling is a big, wide fellow. So is Seal Harris, my big Negro sparring partner. I fight him just as I'm going to fight Carnera.

Jackson and the other fellow are poking plenty of lefts into my face. If I wanted to be a boxer, I'd be training so as to push away those lefts. But I'm not a boxer—I'm a slugger. That's how I'll win—slugging

THE NEXT CHAMPION

I expect Carnera to land plenty of lefts on my complexion before I crack half his ribs. So what I'm doing is to let the boys stab me with the left, and then try to counter with body punches

The boys say I'm rotten—based on what they are. They don't see me on the road in the mornings That's where I'm doing some high class stuff and learning a few extra tricks.

I'm training harder for this fight than I ever did for any battle of my life, and I'll be tip-top on June 14.

I'm your next champion, folks.

Pompton Lakes, N. J., June 11—When a man is in good condition he feels he is equal to almost any task

That's just the way I feel about my title bout with Max Baer at the Madison Square Garden Bowl Thursday night. I have trained very hard but, for the most part, it has been pleasant work. Now for the fight.

They say I am too amiable to be a great fighter, but Max Baer will learn what happens to a fresh young fellow, free with his insults, mad.

Ever since this Baer match was made, Americano Max has been boasting what he will do to me. At first he said

"I'll knock him out like I did Schmeling in 10 rounds."

MAX NEEDS LESSON

His conceit grew and he roared

"Primo won't last six rounds with me."

As crowds of reporters and pretty girls got bigger, he bellos ed.

"Six rounds will be too long for the Carnary guy; I will flatten him in two or three; perhaps the very first round!"

And now that so many people call him "America's hope," he may be broadcasting out on the corner of his mouth as he enters the ring:

"Sure, I'll knye that big gawk in a minute; just watch me, girls!"

Now I am not so foolish as to believe that Baer personally does all the boasting charged to him, but I do know that he does some of it and does not think much of me as a fighter.

So I must give him a lesson—one that he and the fans will not soon forget—when he tries to win my title with his flats, and not over the radio, in motion pictures, or at night clubs.

MAINE TRIP HELPED

It was a great thing for me to go to the Maine woods for three weeks early this spring. It was quite an experience, something new, but I had the right bunch, for the trip gave me what I wanted

I didn't realize just how much good it all had done until I returned to Pompton Lakes and found I had gained about ten pounds in weight, all of which was bone and muscle. I felt better than I ever had and my sinews were just pliable steel. I was as hard as rocks.

It has prepared me for the test. I will be ready.

Stirring Scenes as Golf King Is Crowned

Olin Dutra, Los Angeles pro, actually putted himself into the national open championship. Here he is shown on the 18th green of the final round, sinking the putt which gave him the title by one stroke.

JACK CONWAY SAYS BAER IS SHORT OF WORK

By Jack Conway

Asbury Park, N. J., June 11—Max Baer is making a desperate effort to get into first class physical condition for his 15-round world championship bout with Primo Carnera, which will be staged at the Garden Bowl in Long Island, N. Y., on Thursday night.

Baer is not in the best shape today, but he feels that by Thursday night he will be fit to make his bid for the title.

I saw Baer blaze through 12 rounds of work before a crowd of 2000 persons Sunday afternoon. He is far from being in the excellent condition he was the night he knocked out Max Schmeling last June, but neither is he in the terrible physical condition Bill Brown of the New York Athletic Commission claims he is in.

NEEDS 10 DAYS

If Baer had ten days or two weeks more in which to prepare for Carnera, he would have ample time to get ready for the giant. As it is, he only has three more days to get fit, and may still be some ways from physical perfection Thursday

"I'll be all right for Carnera," Baer told me before he started his workout. "When I was fighting regularly, I never required more than two weeks for training

"I have been down here a month, and feel I shall be ready for Primo. I would like to have had a week or two more in which to get into condition, but perhaps it is all for the best.

"I am at least not in danger of going stale. I might be just lucky enough to arrive at the peak Thursday night. If I do, it will be just too bad for Carnera.

"They tell me Primo is down pretty fine, and is in danger of going stale."

I asked Baer how his hands were in view of the reports that they were in bad shape.

"Look at them for yourself," said Max as he showed me his dukes. "Not a bruise on them. I have been protecting them with plenty of bandages and tape, and have not been taking reckless shots at the heads of my sparring partners. I have been directing my blows at the body so as to give my hands as much protection as possible."

Baer first boxed three rounds with Dynamite Jackson of Los Angeles. Jackson is a pretty fair heavyweight, and he gave Baer a hard workout.

BAER'S RIGHT MISSES

Jackson crowded Max, and kept the heavyweight challenger backing away most of the time. Baer took some good shots at his opponent's body.

Cecil Harris, a colored heavyweight from Jersey, then clowned for three rounds with Baer.

Larry Johnson, Chicago light-heavyweight, followed Harry into the ring. He is a first class boxer, and made Baer step lively for two rounds. Johnson did all of the forcing, and most of Baer's right hand swings went around Larry's neck

Baer [illegible] some stiff punches to the body when in close. He rallied several times, and looked like the Baer who knocked out Schaaf and Schmeling.

Johnson boxed two rounds with Baer. He was followed by Roy Lazer who was used one round for speed

Jack Dempsey attended the workout. He stood behind Baer's corner, and was pleased at the vim Max displayed in his work.

$100 for Ringside

Asbury Park, N. J., June 11—Mike Jacobs, buildup man for the Carnera-Baer fight, is getting as high as $100 for choice ringside seats.

"The average price of tickets within the first ten rows at the agencies is from $75 to $100," said Mike. "I'll say all the tickets at $60 each I can get because I can turn them over at a good profit.

"Other than the high-priced tickets, the sale hasn't been so hot," he explained

"People who want to be down close to the ring don't seem to care how high the price is, but the average fight fan isn't so free with his money."

GLASGOW TILTS WITH LONGO

Joe Glasgow will attempt to erase one of the few defeats on his record when he mingles with Charlie Longo, rugged Boston welterweight, at the Quincy Arena tonight

The prelim card will be featured by the appearance of Tony Bent former national amateur champion. Tony, who has yet to meet defeat since entering professional ranks, will oppose Eddie Millson of Dorchester.

Abe Feinrod and Frankie Garcia clash over the six-round route, while the four-rounders pair Gordon Hathaway of Wollaston and John Monte of Somerville, Mal Chase of Belmont and Joe Kelly of Charlestown

MIDDIE SQUAD AT 'KEEPSIE'

By Associated Press

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 11—Sixteen of the 18 crews which will compete in the intercollegiate rowing association regatta Saturday were harbored in their quarters on the Hudson today.

Accompanied by their coach, Charles (Buck) Walsh, the U. S. Naval Academy's varsity and junior varsity eights arrived by rail, for the first time, in time for dinner at Navy's well-equipped boathouse. They will take their first row here this morning.

Coach Jim Wray, here since Friday, and Coach Cornell fleet shortly before 7 a. m., and less than four hours later watched the big red vessels glide from paddy by easily for six and one-half miles in fairly rough water.

Coach Jim Teneyeck sent his Syracuse complement through the longest workout, while Washington and Columbia each dipped their blades for about four miles.

Close Book on Fight

New York, June 11 (INS)—The sensational fight by Bill Brown, state boxing commissioner, in which he declared Max Baer entitled to fight Primo Carnera Thursday night, has the gambling gentry frankly worried.

For example, Broadway betting commissioners have closed their books and refuse to take any more bets until they have had an opportunity to find out what lies behind the commissioner's remarks. Before the books closed, Carnera was listed as a 9 to 1 favorite.

Pipgras Faces New Operation, Lost to Red Sox for Season

George Pipgras, right hand pitcher of the Red Sox, today went on the voluntary retired list and automatically withdrew from baseball for the rest of the year. A bone growth on his right elbow was discovered last evening when an x-ray was made of the arm which was operated upon for the removal of bone splinters last summer.

Pipgras is in the Peter Bent Brigham hospital at the moment, preparing for an operation which will take place tomorrow.

Eddie Collins, Red Sox general manager, said today that he was hopeful that Pipgras would recover the use of his arm in another year and return to the club. But the outlook is gloomy and the probability is that the pitcher will never again be able to make the major league grade.

Following the operation, and after convalescing, Pipgras will return to his home in St. Petersburg, Fla.

The history of operations on pitcher's arms is one in which the patient seldom returns to normal strength. Henry Johnson of the Sox, who also underwent a surgical treatment for elbow splinters last year, has been sub calibre thus far and has only had one outstanding game to his credit.

Pipgras's loss is only another chapter in Red Sox misfortune this season, coming as an anti climax to the ineffectiveness of Lefty Grove. So that the club, which has invested a large fortune in players, has suffered a loss of more than $150,000 in the two men, with the possibility that neither will return to top form.

During the early part of the season Pipgras has complained of sharp pains in his elbow, which caused Manager Bucky Harris to use him sparingly and only as a relief pitcher at rare intervals. He had diagnosed his own ailment as a shrinkage of the elbow tendons, which would gradually respond to work, and only last night agreed to an X-ray which disclosed the bony growth.

McLarnin Likes Max

Asbury Park, N. J., June 11—Jimmy McLarnin, Jack Britton, Willie Ritchie and Johnny Dundee, all former welter or lightweight champions, saw Max Baer in action his Sunday drill here.

None of them questions Baer's ability as a natural fighter, but each would like to see him a bit further advanced in his training.

"Yes," said McLarnin, "one punch may win for him. He is always dangerous."

McLarnin was asked if he was going to spend the summer in Ireland.

"Not this year," he replied with a smile. "I never could explain to the Irish how I lost to Barney Ross. I am going to remain in this country and fight Ross again in September."

Kellett to Join Sox

Philadelphia, June 11—Don Kellett, Penn shortstop, will join the Boston Red Sox upon graduation, June 20, it was reported reliably here.

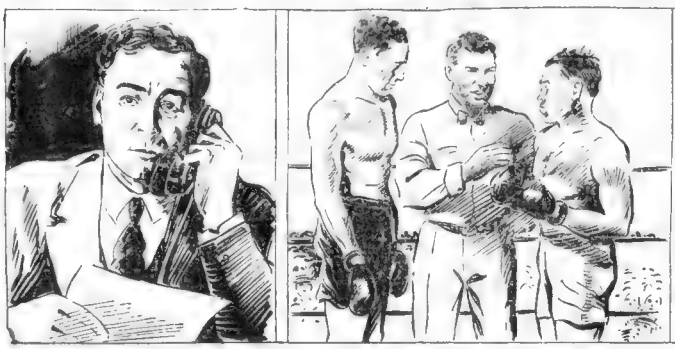
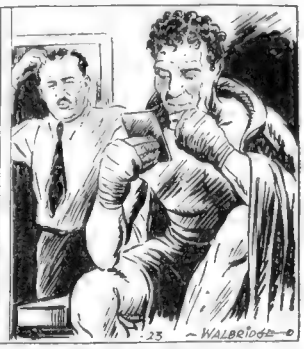
Life of Max Baer



Governor Balzar Laid Down the Law

Dempsey Said: "Everything Goes!"

"He's Butting Me," Paolino Protested



"Quick, Get Me a Mirror!"

As in many big fights the rumor of "fix" made the rounds. It became so serious the late Governor Fred Balzar, a real sportsman and fight enthusiast, sounded a warning to Baer and Paolino.

"The people of Nevada expect a fight with no stalling!"

Tex Rickard had promoted and refereed the Jack Johnson-Jim Jefferies battle at Reno in 1910, and Jack Dempsey, the promoter, was the third man in the ring on the day Baer and Uzcudun stepped in for a battle scheduled for 20 rounds.

Paolino, strong as an ox, was in his usual good condition. Dolph Thomas had Baer trained to the minute. He looked like a Greek god. He dwarfed the squat Basque and looked an inch or more taller than Dempsey who stood between them giving final instructions.

"Now remember!" Dempsey said. "The people here have been promised a fight. I want a fight! Everything goes! But I'm not going to give the fight on a foul!"

It had been 90 in the shade at 7 o'clock the morning of Fourth of July, 1931. To escape the heat the promoters had waited until four o'clock in the afternoon—for the cool of the evening. Even then it was 110 in the shade. It was a scorching afternoon. The pitch ran like glue on the new pine benches. To make it still more uncomfortable a careless cigarette tosser nearly burned up a section of the bleachers.

They "got away" immediately after Dempsey's instructions. It was a barroom brawl. In an early round Baer clinched and brought his head banging up under Paolino's chin. Paolino clutched tighter and shouted to Dempsey:

"Hey! He's butting me!"

"Butt him back!" Dempsey growled.

That kind of a fight was right up the Basque's alley. Paolino, 5 feet, 11½ inches tall, got under Baer's chin with his iron head frequently after that.

The sun sank deeper westward, but the arena by the ninth round had heated up like a brick kiln. In his corner Baer almost wilted. To Dolph Thomas, chief second, he said:

"I'm tired!"

"He's just as tired as you are." Thomas "consoled" him.

So Baer plodded back for the next eleven rounds. With a savage rush Paolino shouldered, banged and nearly knocked Baer through the ropes in the nineteenth. Paolino wasn't much better than Baer, only rougher. At the end of the twentieth Dempsey raised Uzcudun's hand. In the dressing room Baer shouted to his manager:

"Quick, Ham! A mirror! I want to see if I got any scratches or bruises!"

How would a bruised groom look standing there with the blushing bride-to-be?

Mr. Boston Says:

Dusek or George Would Lick Baer In Mixed Bout

By JACK CONWAY

Asbury Park N. J., June 11—I WOULD like to see what would happen if you locked Ernie Dusek and Max Baer in a room, and told the boys to pull each other apart. I have been fight minded for a good many years, but in such a test I would bet a couple of new hats on Dusek.

It would be a jam worth witnessing. Dusek is the roughest of the wrestlers, while Baer is the tough boy among the boxers.

Mr. Boston

When Baer fought Max Schmeling last June, he breezed from his corner in the first round and belted the German low. Everything he had was behind the punch.

"Didn't you know, Max, that your low punch cost you the first round?" a youthful sports writer later asked.

"Yeah!" replied Baer, "but Schmeling never did get over that sock, and I finally knocked him cold."

"Fighting is a rough game. I never asked favors from anybody, and I don't want anybody to ask any from me."

This talk reminded me of the Jack Dempsey of the Firpo fight.

"All I want the referee to do," Dempsey told me at his training camp at Saratoga Springs, "is to introduce me to the big guy. I'll then take care of myself."

Dusek is also a rough and ready fellow who doesn't like to be annoyed by a referee. He keeps tearing away from going to going and is not much concerned as to what the opposition does.

Has Chance for Title

DUSEK, LIKE Baer, has a chance to win a world title this week Old Man Opportunity is knocking at his door, and he does not intend to push him away.

Dusek has battled George twice. He scored a fall in each match, and only the breaks of the game prevented him from winning the title.

Dusek tuned up for George by knocking off "Bull" Martin at the Boston Arena. He's in fine condition, and is confident that youth and aggressiveness will enable him to knock the champion from his throne.

George a Great Champion

I CONSIDER George a great champion. He has been wrestling since he was 15 years old. He knows all the fine points of the game, and in addition is a rough hombre.

Like Dusek, I think George could lick Baer in a rough and tumble. He could also pick the gigantic Carnera up in his arms and pin him.

A fighter cannot lick a wrestler with open rules. Once the wrestler dived and got his dukes on the boxer's legs, the show would be over. A fighter must be on his feet, and properly balanced, to deliver a kayo smash.

In every important clash between a boxer and a wrestler, the mat man has always won.

ROSEBUDS FACE NORWOOD NINE AT MALDEN

By Bob Ahearn

With an array of college and semi-pro stars in their lineups, Norwood Civics and Wayland Rosebuds cross bats at Craduock Park, Malden, tonight in the standout attraction of the Suburban Twi League. Smart Oil nine of Waltham, now leading the league, plays host to St. Peter's in the other scheduled contest.

Johnny Dixon is expected to twirl for the Civics while Normie Sims, former Holy Cross twirler, is due to get the nomination for Roger Baker's Club.

The Rosebuds, under the management of Bill Barrett, one time Red Sox player, have been defeating all comers in the past several weeks and should give the Smart entry a fight for league leadership.

In an exhibition tilt, Hall All-Stars and West Medford clash at the Medford Playstead.

R H White Co. team plays tonight in a Retail Store League clash, meeting the representatives of S. S. Pierce at South Boston Stadium.

Four games are on tap for patrons of the Boston Park Baseball League tonight. Jordan Marsh, with Dick Edwards at the helm, plays at Charlestown; St. Augustines at Roslindale; Raymonds and Neponset at South Field; and Upcos and Tow Boaters at Roberts.

Dick Casey's Neponset club, safely entrenched in first place in the Eastern Division, hopes to advance at the expense of the Raymond Club. Charlie O'Hara, Boston College High moundsman, has been added to the roster of the Neponset entry.

There are 17 tilts in all booked for this week, which is the last of the first half. Four of the encounters are being played off because of previous postponements due to rain.

With Loud their third baseman, back in the lineup, the Cambridge Red Sox hope to pin a defeat on Joe McGillivray's Waltham club tonight at Rindge Field in the fea ture Boston Twi encounter.

Newton, picking up strength due to the addition of players home from school and college, should give the Fraser All-Stars a battle of it at Curtin Park, Lynn. In the other games, Ed Carrullo's Arlington club entertains the Hagans of Somerville.

Leading Tigers Here Tomorrow; Senators Club to Beat---Harris

By Dave Egan

With five outfits — New York Cleveland St. Louis, the Red Sox and the Senators — fighting to knock them out of first place, the Detroit Tigers, with Mickey Cochrane leading them, will charge on Fenway Park tomorrow afternoon to open a four game series with our noble young men.

They are the spear-head of the most serious Western invasion the American League has known since Ty Cobb's wicked spikes were gleaming in the summer sun.

Mickey has his athletes in first place, than which there is no than whicher.

Walter Johnson has his Cleveland jaddy-bucks snapping at the heels of the second place Yankees.

Rogers Hornsby hits the trail from the dusty West with his team in fourth place.

Three of the first four teams come from the West, which is a highly unusual procedure and a distinct challenge to the supremacy of the Eastern clubs in the league. Something must be done about it—something highly drastic—and the Eastern clubs will attempt to go to work on their Western brethren, starting no later than tomorrow.

Bucky Harris, lately manager of Detroit, holds out hope for the faithful Easterners, however.

"The team every club in the league must beat is the Washington Senators," he said this morning. "They are the steadiest team in the league, steady in pitching, steady in fielding, and steady in hitting. Lake Sewell, their first string catcher, has not caught an inning this year, and he'll strengthen them when he returns."

"Cronin? A great shortstop and a great leader. Even if he hit only .230, which he's hitting now, he'd still be a great ball player. But he'll hit. Oh, yes, he'll hit."

Meanwhile, the Red Sox are stepping along steadily and serenely only 4½ games behind the Tigers. If Lefty Grove had come through in the expected manner they would have been so far out in front the boxing commission would have stopped it long ago and declared it "no contest".

Yesterday Wes Ferrell won a thrilling victory over the Senators to clinch the fourth straight series which the Red Sox have won two over the Senators and one each over the Athletics and the Yankees.

Ferrell's old flame ball was noticeable by its absence. He was throwing dipsy-doos and dillacs all during the afternoon, pitching with his brain almost as much as with his arm.

And then, to give a Rover Boy climax to the matinee, he knocked in the winning run with the bases full in the ninth on a long fly to center field.

CATHOLIC LOOP GIVES PRIZES TONIGHT

By Bill Connell

More than 300 boys, members of the Catholic High School League teams in all sports, gather tonight at St. Mary's School Hall in Brookline for the annual Get-Together and presentation of league trophies.

The event is one of the major gatherings of the year among school athletes, bringing into social contact so large a number of performers in this strong young organization.

Presentation of the Cardinal O'Connell trophies to the league champions, a banquet and evening's entertainment for the boys, their Reverend Pastors, their coaches, and school directors round out the program. St. Mary's of Brookline athletes are guests of honor as well as hosts, for the baseball team won its second consecutive league title last week.

The entire affair is under the direction of Rev. George M. Dowd, president of the league.

Andover Academy once again pounded an upset into the record of its half century series against Exeter in baseball as it took a 7-2 verdict on Saturday. The win chilled a three-year victory streak for Exeter, and left the series count at Andover 28, Exeter 23.

Ken Weldaw closed his Arlington High pitching career with a flourish as he struck out 11 Medford batters, though the latter team won the game, 8 to 2. Errors by Weldaw's teammates accounted for the score. Joe Manso of Medford also turned in a first class hill performance, allowing only two hits.

Sox Trip to Portland Grove Loses Starting Status

By Dave Egan

The Red Sox are taking a skeleton squad to Portland, Me., today to play a semi-professional team there. Philip Troy, the deadpan secretary, expects to startle the peasants with his sartorial raiment weather permitting.

Washington is the only team in either league which shifts its infield for right and left handed pitchers. When a southpaw is in there you will find Red Kress on second and Ossie Bluege on third. And when a right hander is throwing them, Buddy Myer is on second and Travis on third.

From now on, until further notice, it looks as if Bucky Harris will use his pitchers somewhat as follows: Rhodes, Welch, Ostermueller and Wes Ferrell, using Lefty Grove mainly as a relief pitcher for the time being.

Sid Samuel Jones put the brakes on Detroit, beating "Schoolboy" Rowe 3-1. Though the Yankees won, the Tigers still have their teeth sunk into first place by a margin of one game.

All hail! Cleveland scored seven runs, and Bob Weiland finally won his second game of the season, beating St. Louis 8-1. Now perhaps he'll get lucky and win the victories to which he is entitled.

Open date today, in both leagues. Guess I'll see a Park Department game, so as not to feel the gnawing pangs of lonesomeness.

It took our Braves 11 innings to do it, but they overcame the dizzy Dodgers, 20-8, over on the banks of the beautiful Gowanus. The daft Dodgers were forced to employ six pitchers, all to no avail.

With little hemming and less hawing, Lou Gehrig says the prize rookie of the year is Harland Clift, third baseman for the St. Louis Browns. I'm glad that's settled.

Our "Bloody" Ryan of Lynn got "four out of four" as the Giants beat the Phillies 18-7 and one of them was a home run. Lawsy me!

Lou Gehrig hit a homer to tie young Zeke Bonura for the lead in the home run derby. Bonura, for all his home runs, is hitting only around .275.

I wonder if Joe Cronin regrets trading "Goose" Goslin to the Tigers. He has been playing great ball for that prominent saxophone tooter, Mickey Cochrane.

PIEROTTI PLANS MAT COMEBACK

An entirely new sports wrinkle will be seen in Alex MacLean's wrestling show at the Arena on Wednesday night when Al Pierotti steps in to battle Harry Lewis in a special bout before the main event. Nick Lutze vs. Sasha, the cruel Cossack, enters the ring.

Pierotti needs no introduction hereabouts, being one of the best athletes in local history. He was an All-American center at Washington and Lee, and at one time pitched for the Braves.

The preliminaries list George Nerio of Boston against Yankee Hall of Montreal, Louis Foote of Salem against Jim Spencer of Bates, and Andy Brown of New York lined up against Jack Sparks of Albany.

Braves Will Be Up There Soon—Quinn

McKechnie's Enough to Get Any Club Up, Ex-Sox Boss Says

By Joe Cashman

En Route to St. Louis, June 11

Mr. Robert Quinn did his level best to make us miss this rattler. We had less than an hour to get from Alberta Field to the Penn station over in New York, and Bob insisted upon taking almost half that time.

But we must admit his cheerful [illegible] was worth all the [illegible]

"You're going to write plenty of victory stories before you get back to Boston," Bob began. "The Braves' poor start on this trip doesn't mean a thing. They're simply been on one of those sprees, which can't be explained or averted, when everybody does everything wrong.

"They're fortunate to get it over and done with so early in the race. It happens to every club some time in the course of a season, and it's usually fatal if it's late in coming.

WIN NINE OF LAST 13

"How do I know they've been in a slump and not showing their true class? All the records prove it. They're about the .500 mark for the season, and, while they've lost six of their last eight games, don't forget they've won nine of their last 13 starts.

"But I wouldn't need any figures to convince me. Bill McKechnie's enough. He's the type of manager every magnate wishes he had but few acquire. He can get more out of mediocre material than any other man I've seen in almost a half century in the game.

"And anytime he has pitchers of the calibre of Frankhouse, Cantwell, Betts and Brandt, all winners despite their recent showing, assisted by such standouts as Urbanski, Berger and Whitney, it's baseball's safest bet that his club will be a serious pennant contender.

Bob looked as though he thought the Braves were already out of their slump. We wouldn't go so far as to say that just yet, even though they did win a thrilling 11-inning victory in the final Brooklyn game.

They played like champions after the seventh inning, with Bob Smith pitching scoreless ball to beat Van Lingo Mungo, the ace of the Dodger pitchers to work.

But the best said about their play up to the seventh, the better. They piled up a five-run lead and tossed it away.

Ed Brandt, making his first start since May 20, had that lead, but he didn't feel capable of going more than five innings. Fred Frankhouse relieved and was hammered for four runs in the sixth before Smith could get ready. Bob by couldn't prevent the enemy tying the count in the seventh but he was immune thereafter, until Randy Moore gained him a well-deserved victory with a single with two on in the 11th.

Pulling such a game out of the fire after apparently tossing it away may have been just what our heroes needed to regain their top stride. We'll know more about that in St. Louis tomorrow.

Warriors Come Back to Beat Dodgers in 11th Inning

Washington, June 11—The Washington Senators came from behind to defeat the Brooklyn Dodgers, 6 to 5, in 11 innings today. Ossie Bluege's single scored Buddy Myer with the winning run.

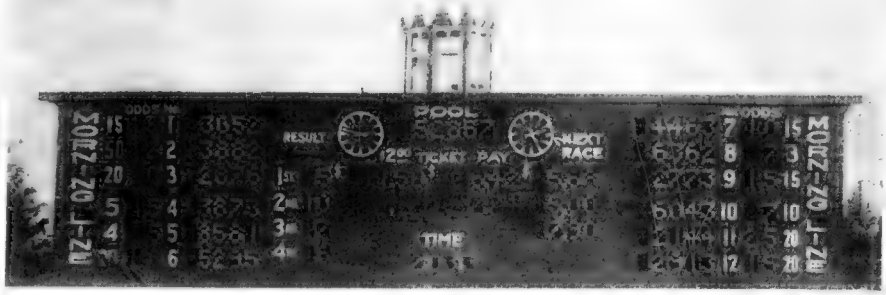
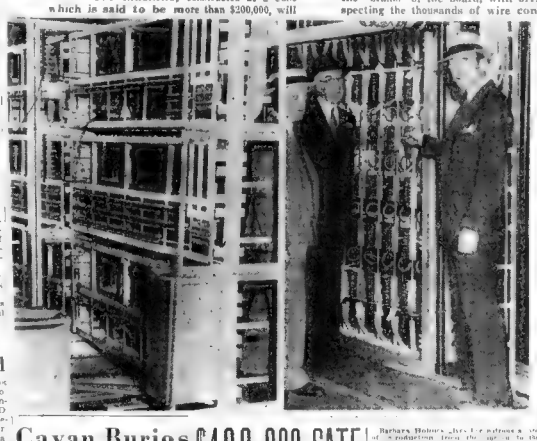
TAP'S TIPS



The new betting Totalisator at Rockingham Park race track is shown as workmen flashed the hundreds of lights on its face in final tests. The machine, constructed at a cost which is said to be more than $200,000, will be in operation at the coming Rockingham race meeting, which opens June 23 at the Salem, N. H., layout. The lower scene shows the "brains" of the board, with officials inspecting the thousands of wire connections. This "Tote" flashes the exact odds before each race, and automatically changes the odds on every bet made. (Pictures by Boston American Staff Photographer.)



Band Concert, Exhibit at Rockingham Sunday

A public showing of the new $250,000 American Totalisator will be held next Sunday at Rockingham Park. This dress rehearsal is for the express purpose of allowing the public to acquaint themselves with the new method of wagering which will be in vogue at the forthcoming session at Rockingham Park, beginning June 23.

In order to give the public a complete picture of the new Capt. E. M. Manager Mortimer M. Mahoney is planning to conduct seven imaginary races. Mahoney will have his entire crew on hand to operate the "tote".

In order to provide a colorful background for the "tote" test, Lou Smith has arranged for a three-hour band concert from 1 to 4 p. m.

Frank J. Bryan, race secretary of the Eastern Horse Show meeting, which opens on July 16 at Brockton, is due in town tomorrow.

Exactly 320 new stalls will be completed at Rockingham this week, which will increase to 600 the number of new stalls since last year's racing.

Tom Hathaway, a veteran member of the clocking brigade, ends up that he will be on hand for the Rockingham opening on June 23.

Nobe Goldfarb, who is under contract to Elmer Trustman, will pack his bag at the conclusion of today's sport at Charlestown W. Va. and head for horse parts.

Dodgers Release Hogg for Zachary

New York, June 11 (AP)—Sonny Hogg, infielder recently brought up from Dayton, O., by the Brooklyn Dodgers, today was released on option to Richmond of the Piedmont circuit to make room for Tom Zachary, veteran pitcher.

Zachary recently was made a free agent by the Braves and promptly signed by the Dodgers. His addition to the roster, however, put the Dodgers one over the player limit of 23, so Hogg was let go.

Cavan Buries All-Star Side by 11 to 0

Cavan gaelic football team, champions of Ireland showed why it won the Irish title when it overwhelmed an All-Star United States team, 11 to 0, in the exhibition game at Celtic Park, Forest Hills, before 6000 fans.

Marred to some extent by the thunderstorm the game was interesting and exciting throughout both periods, due to the clever and deceptive tactics of the visiting Irishmen, both in handling and booting the ball.

True to form the stars of the invaders were Captain Jim Smith, giant center halfback, Leader Vince McGovern, Mike "Lefty" McGhee and Johnny Smallhorn.

These four treated the large crowd to a fast-to-well by their brilliant manipulation of the ball with Smallhorn doing most of the scoring.

A goal by McGhee, two points by McGovern and another point by Devlin gave the visitors a 7-0 lead at the half.

In the second period Smallhorn notched three more points and Dhair added another to make the total 11 to 0.

Cavan took things easy in the period, and withdrew Devlin, Lorch and Smith, replacing them with Boylan, Reilly and Brady.

Sandy Burr Wins Four-Ball Title

Sandy Burr is the champion of the Metropolitan four-ball league for 1934. It clinched the title with its 7-5 victory over Worcester.

Thorny Lea advanced to second place with an 11½-½ victory over Framingham at Brockton.

$400,000 GATE FOR TITLE GO

By Associated Press

New York, June 11—For a fight in which one principal allegedly hasn't worked hard enough to get up a sweat and the other is reported to be overt Jack Dempsey Carnera's heavyweight title defense against Max Baer is doing right well from a box office standpoint.

The advance sale today was understood to be a shade under $200,000 with indications of a "gate" of $400,000 or more by the time the boxers enter the ring of Madison Square Garden's Long Island bowl, Thursday night.

Baseball Tips—No. 4

By Austen Lake

THE LONG FOLLOW THROUGH

Long distance hitters like Wally Berger of the Braves know the extra driving power that comes from a long follow through, by letting the bat swing to the end of its natural arc without smothering the swing. Always aim to meet the ball out in front of the plate, where the point of greatest power lies and where the arms are fully extended. Remember, a cramped swing with the arms close to the body, is a weak, badly timed swing. And the wrists—don't forget to give the wrists full play, because there is where the distance hitter gets the extra few feet of power that turn long, harmless flies into home runs. Young batters often learn rhythm, or timing, by practicing their natural swing in front of a mirror. In batting, the easiest way is always the best way.

SAVIN HILL Y. C. INTRODUCES NEW CLASS

By E. S. Schriftgiesser

A new racing class for the Savin Hill Yacht Club is in the making. The first boat designed by the prominent naval architect Fred Geanor appeared at the club's open regatta and more are being built.

The new class is a 16-footer, half decked rigged with a modern marconi mainsail and jib and was built by Lamb in Scituate. The rig is higher than that carried by the Indian boats, and as the new craft spreads 192 feet of sail, she should be a little faster.

Fred, of course, says she is a whole lot faster. In any event, big crew has appears a speedy and able boat for racing in the bay, and S. vin Hill members think it will make a good class for the owners of the sailing dinghies to graduate into.

Savin Hill's Yacht Club's first open regatta—the first at the club in 16 years—was highly successful in spite of rain and shifting wind.

Practically all the 82 racing boats had finished before the showers came and although the vagaries of the wind spoiled the competition in some races most of them got some windward work.

Commodore Hosea D. White, on the job in his new 46-foot power cruiser Markay did a very competent job in running off the regatta. And the race committee, with the assistance of Howard Gannett and Bill Carlton, kept the big fleet moving without a hitch.

The wind was about northwest at the start of the afternoon, and southeast before the day was over, a shift which upset the best laid plans of skippers and crews.

NEW HAVEN HAS GOOD GAIN IN REVENUES

Carrier Is Winning the Battle to Regain Traffic

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

New Haven railroad revenues continued [illegible] month again [illegible] gains are [illegible] have [illegible] 7 per [illegible] greater [illegible] the [illegible] month. This is the carrier [illegible] headed by John J. Pelley continues to make progress in [illegible] battle to regain traffic and earnings. For the month of May it is likely to [illegible] somewhat larger deficit than that shown in April will result from considerably larger expenditures for maintenance. [illegible] May, 1933, will not appear to be favorable on [illegible] but must remember [illegible] operations were hereby [illegible] extraordinary [illegible] sentiment following [illegible] days.

The tangled state of affairs in the steel industry as regard the threatened strike is a point in the stock market's favor. For the reason that any real division of strength augurs well for arbitration and complete avoidance of a shut-down. After the rath [illegible] brilliant upside move of late last week we expect some measure of reaction. Sales of long stock in our hypothetical position have not been made, and he reaction will simply be treated as an opportunity to increase commitments in desirable issues.

The easing of government spending which many had a right to expect after reading official views on the matter a few months back is not developing. The drouth and a host of private enterprise is take hold as anticipated are responsible. It is quite probable that more liberal views on federal funds will prevent a very serious letdown in industrial activity this summer, thus another bear argument on equities would be negatived.

STOCK PRICES ARE LOWER AT CLOSING

New York, June 11—Stocks were worked moderately lower in today's dealings on the New York Exchange. Declines ranging from fractions to around a point predominated at the close.

Although strike news was not so gloomy as it has been, and business and industry seemed to be holding their own on the face of the general depressants, there was no strong buying urge apparent.

Scattered equities showed firming tendencies, but there were also a few soft spots in the list. The trading volume, during the greater part of the session, was about one-half that of last Friday.

Grains, after receding, came back for advance of fractions to around a cent a bushel despite more rain in the dry crop areas. Cotton was a little shaded, but silver and rubber were lower. Bonds failed in a narrow range. The dollar improved in terms of leading foreign exchanges.

Some pessimism was shown over the Germa... financial situation, and it was feared in banking quarters that a currency crisis was imminent. Bonds of the Reich were heavy.

"Long pull" sentiment was generally bullish on stocks, although brokerage circles pointed out that intermediate technical reactions may be expected.

There was some selling on reports that Congress, after all, may not adjourn this week or at the same time there were numerous orders "under the market" which were said to have provided considerable support on the intermittent declines.

Stocks started downward in the first hour but came back moderately before the end of the period. Volume was lighter than in the last two sessions of last week. American Sugar dropped more than a point. National Steel, Bethlehem Steel and U. S. Steel were down around a point.

American Can was a major fraction lower. American Tobacco B, Colgate, Eastman Kodak, Montgomery Ward, International Harvester and Johns Manville were down fractionally. Corn products showed a loss of more than a point.

Sales to 11 a. m. approximated 1,130,000 shares.

The list partly recovered during the second hour. A number of shares cancelled their earlier declines and showed net advances, participating among some the communication and metal issues.

People's Drug advanced 2 points. Kress advanced a point and Grocery Radio was better than a point higher. Chrysler showed a loss of a point. Sears Roebuck, Spiegel, May Stern and U. S. Smelting were at fractionally lower levels.

Sales to noon approximated 390,000 shares.

The list was under mild pressure in the third hour with Auburn the principal target, dropping more than 6 points. General Motors and Chrysler were down fractions to more than a point. U. S. Steel and Vanadium were at moderately lower levels.

Brooklyn Union Gas was a point higher. A session of moderate proportion were recorded by Celanese, American Can, Douglas Aircraft, Electric Storage Battery, Freeport Texas and New York Central. People's Drug was more than 2 points higher.

Sales to 1 p. m. approximated 510,000 shares.

In the fourth hour shares of Postal Telegraph preferred and Western Union got up a point or more each, and International Nickel, Chrysler and Johns Manville were more active at a smaller gain. American Telephone did virtually nothing after a delayed start. Issues of Cerro De Pasco, U. S. Smelting, American Commercial Alcohol and Westinghouse were better.

Auburn Automobile dropped 5 points upon cessation of the quarterly dividend. Others, down fractionally to around a point, included Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, DuPont, American Tobacco B, Chrysler, General Motors, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem Steel, Consolidated Gas, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, American Sugar Refining, U. S. Industrial Alcohol and Schenley.

MODEL BUILDERS' COURSE—LESSON 8

Greetings, Junior Birdmen! Before progressing with the construction of more complicated flying models, the beginner should build a simple low-wing propelled flier of all Balsa after completing the glider. Many beginners' instruction courses take you right from the glider to the built-up flying craft. This is too big a step for most boys and girls, however.

The difference between an all-Balsa wood model and a built-up model is that the all-Balsa has the wing and tail unit cut from a sheet Balsa wood. This is a simple procedure. A built-up model has the wing and tail unit built up in the form of a framework and covered with tissue paper, just like the framework of the wings and tail unit of a real plane.

William Seelig

It is sufficient in this second model that we advance you with such new steps as making wire fittings, carving a propeller and mounting the rubber motor, without adding the difficult task of constructing a framework and covering it with tissue.

Materials for Low Wing Flier

The reason the low wing model is chosen, with the wing under the fuselage, rather than the high wing model with wing above the fuselage, is that the wing is more stable and less likely to fall off while your model is in flight. After you have become accustomed to making wing clips that will fit properly, you will be in a position to make the high wing flying model, which is better for endurance flying and contest flights.

Following are the materials you should get from your local model plane supply store or department store for the construction of this low-wing flier.

One "block" of Balsa wood three fourths (¾) of an inch by one and one-half inch (1½) by seven (7) inches in length, for the propeller.

One piece of Balsa "sheet" one sixteenth (1-16) of an inch thick, by two and one-quarter (2¼) inches wide by eighteen (18) inches in length for your wing.

One piece of Balsa "sheet" one thirty-second (1-32) of an inch thick, by one (1) inch in width by two and one-half (2-½) inches in length for the wheels, one thrust bearing, seven small washers and eighteen inches of .028 music wire for fittings.

Twelve inches of .040 music wire for landing gear, one tube of cement. One small piece of medium sandpaper, one small piece of fine sandpaper, four feet of one eighth (1-8) inch flat rubber for motor power.

You should have no difficulty at all in obtaining any of these supplies at your local model plane supply store. Should there be none convenient to you, many aviation magazines carry the advertisements of mail order houses selling complete supplies, in which event, however, it will take you a week or so to get your materials. In the meantime clip out the instructions in this course so that you will have them on hand when the materials arrive.

This model cannot be entered in the forthcoming junior birdmen model plane derby. However, the next two models will be eligible for entry and will be published in time for you to complete them for the contest.

Start Building Your First Flying Model

The first actual construction lesson for this all-Balsa low wing flier will be published in a few days. Don't miss it if you want to learn to build championship endurance models. This is your opportunity to learn model building and aviation.

Junior Birdmen wishing to compete in the first annual New England Model Plane Derby to be held on Saturday, July 7, can send now for their book of rules and entry blank, which is free of charge. The book gives complete information and specifications for models. Simply send a postal or letter, asking for the rules and entry blank, to Junior Birdmen, 100 Summer street, Boston, Mass.

The Junior Birdman, whose picture is printed today, is William Seelig, 16, of 127 Dudley street, Boston, an alert and ambitious member of the organization. William built his full-fold and it returned to him because it contained his Junior Birdmen membership card and the finder turned it in to our office. He has donated pictures of model planes for the Junior Birdmen headquarters. He is son of Captain William Seelig, Sr., who flew during the war and is now head of the Photo News Service.

Happy Landings.

Essay Contest Prize

Two bronze trophies will be awarded, one to the winner of Group "A" and one to the winner of Group "B" who write the best letters of 200 words on "What I Learned at the Junior Birdmen Field Day." The donor of the loving cups is the New England Aircraft School, with which Captain Hilding N. Carlson is associated. The trophies will be inscribed with the names of the winners. The contest closes Friday midnight. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

PRINTS OF SLAIN MAN MAY LEAD TO ARREST

Through the delicate task of taking fingerprints from the body of a man found slain in the woods police hoped today to make identification which would lead to the slayers.

Although the body had been in the woods apparently for a number of weeks, the finger whorls still remain, it was stated today by State Detective Francis W. Clemmey.

When the prints are obtained, Clemmey said, they will be checked with fingerprints in the state police and Federal bureau files and probably will prove to be those of a gangster.

It is the theory of the investigators now that the woods victim was slain in revenge for the killing of John F. O'Rourke, 35, of West Roxbury, police-declared rum runner, whose body was found almost at the same spot until Labor Day.

Three circumstances point toward this theory. In both cases the victim was shot at another place and the body apparently dumped off in the woods near Paine avenue in Taunton, at the Taunton-Norton line.

The almost identical location of the body is a second circumstance, and third is that the clothing was arranged similarly over the face.

Medical Examiner Charles A. Atwood said the man had met his death from a bullet wound in the left cheek.

The victim was about 28 years old, five feet, seven inches tall, weighed about 155 pounds, and had medium brown hair.

GOOD IDEA TO BE 'SNOB,' B. C. GRADS TOLD

Asserting that Professor Robert E. Rogers, Massachusetts Institute of Technology professor and Boston Evening American columnist, was right when he advised college men to be "snobs," E. Mark Sullivan, former city corporation counsel, added that "one either becomes a snob or a slob."

"Professor Rogers was pretty nearly right when he told graduates of M. I. T. to be snobs," Sullivan told members of the senior class of Boston College in the assembly hall at the communion breakfast, which marked the opening of the college's 57th class week and commencement exercises.

"One should associate with the best people.

"There is a straight line that runs between the two and some people manage to walk it, but it calls for practical perfection. Most of us slip a bit to one side or the other, and if you must slip, don't slip on the slobbish side."

Gregory Sullivan, president of his class for four years, brilliant student and football star, of Jamaica Plain, is popular with classmates and made an appeal for immediate membership in the active alumni body.

Sailors Get Air Wave Salute Tonight

By N. F. T.

Not only the music, but likewise the dramatic flavor figuring through the 9:30 to 10 o'clock half hour "Big Show" broadcast tonight (WNAC) is designed to honor the United States fleet now massed in New York harbor. Erno Rapee directs the melody, Helen Menckenschars in a playlet, while Gertrude Niesen attends to the soloing.

follow her songs at the jolly tars in port and Erno Rapee bends the baton over his music men as they offer "Anchors Aweigh," "Sailing, Sailing" and the snappy strains of the good old "Sailor's Hornpipe" selection. Other tunes include the interpretation of a world cruise, featuring typical pieces popular in China, Spain, England, France, Hawaii and Germany.

POSTAL PROGRAM

Vice-President Garner, Postmaster General Farley and Speaker of the House Henry T. Rainey are speakers today (WNAC) between 3:30 and 4:00 o'clock during the ceremonies attending dedication of the new $10,000,000 post office building in Washington.

Answering a reader inquiry as to whether or not "Singin' Sam" is now on the air, the answer is that the deep voiced minstrel man does broadcast, but over a midwestern Columbia network chain of stations from Chicago (WBBM) each Monday night at 10:30. No outlet has his voice available through New England.

Joe Cook begins his new time schedule, switching from Saturday to Monday as of tonight (WEEI) and the hour is between 9:30 and 10 p. m.

STIRRING STORY

There's a gripping dramatization coming along this afternoon (WEEI) at 5:15 in connection with an "International Spy — 1934 model" story as written by Richard W. Rowan and appearing in the August International Cosmopolitan Magazine for July. The theme has to do with revelations that powers more are operating throughout the world today than at any time since the World War.

Best Tomorrow

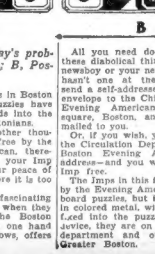
SATURDAY'S ANSWERS

Try Your Hand at Imps

Today, Odd Numbers One Side, Evens Other



A

Answer to Saturday's problem: A, Impossible; B, Possible.

One week of the Imps in Boston Today and the little puzzles have been taken by thousands into the bosoms of Greater Bostonians.

But there are still other thousands to be given out free by the Boston Evening American, therefore if you haven't got your Imp yet you should risk your peace of mind and get yours before it is too late.

Imp is a game more fascinating than crosh-word puzzles when they were the rage—and the Boston Evening American with one hand held up to ward off blows, offers you the Imps free.

B

All you need do to get one of these dandy things is ask your newsboy or your newsdealer. If he hasn't one at the time, merely send a self-addressed and stamped envelope to the Chief Imp, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop square, Boston, and one will be mailed to you.

Or, if you wish, you may call at the Circulation Department of the Boston Evening American's same address—and you will be given an Imp free.

The Imps in this free distribution by the Evening American are cardboard puzzles, but if you wish one in colored metal, with the numbers fixed into the puzzle on a sliding device, they are on sale in various department and other stores in Greater Boston.

Puzzling Imps Grip Fans

The impossibles and the possibles in the Imp department meet again today to see if they can learn whether the possibles are impossible or the impossibles possible—or whether A is B or B is A, and so forth along the line of near delirium.

This is the game of Imp and if you haven't got your Imp yet, you'd better get busy and join the fun.

'Gas' Tax Too High

HIGH taxes make bad citizens.

Take the gasoline tax as an example.

The "gas" tax throughout this country now averages 43 per cent of the sales value of the gasoline, an unwarranted and abnormally excessive rate.

What is the result? The result is that bootlegging in gasoline has now become prevalent.

Bootleggers run in bootleg gasoline across the border as did the traffickers in liquor, hoping to escape the tax. They run it from one State to another, hoping to dump it into the States with the highest taxes.

Further results: The States are losing $100,000,000 annually in taxes on bootleg gasoline; some motorists are getting gasoline of an inferior grade, although paying the price for the best quality.

THIS condition exists in Massachusetts, in common with the other Commonwealths.

The "gas tax," like most other taxes excessive in nature, has been tinctured with deceit and misrepresentation in Massachusetts.

The State assured the motorists that every dollar collected in gasoline taxes would be used exclusively for the construction of new highways and for the repair and improvement of old roadways.

This has not been done. The "gas" tax has been diverted to other uses the past three years, in violation of the solemn pledge.

The Nation and the State require an army of tax gatherers to assess the people and reach into their pockets.

They would need another army to see to it that the taxes were used for the purposes which were promised.

Col. House and War

COLONEL Edward M. House who was known as the "Power Behind the Throne," in the Wilson Administration, has come to his Summer home at Beverly Farms and will be with us throughout the season. We hope that Colonel House will enjoy his sojourn and that he will gain in bodily health and mental vigor.

Now that he is here, let us recall a momentous newspaper interview which Mr. House granted upon his arrival two years ago. The substance of what he then said was that Mr. Wilson had privately pledged the man-power and the material resources of America to England at the time Mr. Wilson was being re-elected President on the slogan, "He kept us out of war."

Colonel House was in a position to know, because he was Mr. Wilson's most intimate friend and counsellor in foreign and international affairs. He knew it. Mr. Wilson knew it. But the great American public did not know it. And they are the ones who bear the bruises, the hurts, the miseries and the expenses of war.

Several thousand of our men are gone, never to return. They were killed in their full bloom of strength and promise. Many, many thousands are still with us, nursing the wounds and mental afflictions they must bear throughout their life on this sphere.

The war debts are still here. England, in common with other Nations, has just defaulted, and the American taxpayers must still continue to carry the load, along with their domestic burdens of high taxes and internal debts.

We shouldn't be put into any war in the future, especially on the private pledge of any American statesman. We ought to build up our defenses, as the safest means of keeping out of war. We should remain the great neutral Nation of the world. And we should not consent to war, except on a solemn referendum by the people. And we should pray that the day of such a referendum may never come.

Camp on Cape Cod

One of the objections to the Beacon Hill plan to establish a National Guard camp in Bourne and Sandwich, near the Cape Cod Canal, was that such a camp would be likely to result in a display of empty tin cans, etc. This, it was contended, might prove offensive to tourists and hurt the summer industry. The objection was evidently poorly based and due in part at least on the way some tourists litter the scenery.

National Guardsmen are trained men. Last summer, after a National Guard encampment near ex-Governor's Fuller's summer home in Rye, N. H., it was noted that the Guardsmen had left not one stray tin can, or scrap of paper. But only a short distance away, a party of careless tourists had scattered cans, wrapping paper, empty pickle bottles and portions of the familiar frankfurter.

Danger to Divers

With New England's delightful swimming season getting under way, swimmers and divers should remember not to mar it by neglecting ordinary caution. Only recently a diver was stunned in Fort Point Channel when his head struck a beam. Divers ought to make sure that the water into which they are diving is free from obstructions. Also that it is sufficiently deep to save them from the menace of broken necks.

Beach visitors could help by refraining from throwing bottles or glass on the sands.

Protecting Autos

It's all very well to warn autoists not to leave ignition keys in their cars and to lock the doors of their automobiles to check theft. But following this advice will not necessarily prevent your car from being stolen. The auto-stealing gangsters here in New England often go around with keys fitting several makes of automobiles. They are better equipped, by the way, than a good many of our Boston parking stations in this regard.

Even amateur auto thieves usually know how to start a car without the use of an ignition key.

Now to Make Good

Edith Nourse Rogers, member of Congress from the Bay State, has been made a "perpetual member" of the Lowell Marksmen's Club. The distinction was accorded Mrs. Rogers because of her efforts in getting a charter from the National Rifle Association for the Lowell organization.

The term "perpetual member" implies considerable length of life either for the member, the club or both. In this case, what one can do is hope for the best.

Government of Men Flouts Congress' Intent in Laws

By James T. Williams, Jr.

There is one aspect of the new deal administration which is causing increasing apprehension among some of its most sincere supporters, who happen also to be lifelong Democrats.

This is the tendency in certain executive departments and agencies, by administrative interpretation and otherwise, to substitute a government of men for a government of law. Many instances could be cited of this dangerous tendency.

The most flagrant offender in this respect has long been the office of the comptroller-general. The example set by the comptroller-general's office has now begun to have a bad effect on the executive departments. Because the comptroller-general's office so frequently substitutes bureaucratic interpretation for the plain intent of the Congress, certain executive officials appear to feel free to follow this sinister example.

A case in point has arisen with regard to the transportation allowed by the federal government for the dependents of naval officers, which is typical of many cases in other departments.

The law provides that when an officer is ordered from duty at a station on board ship to a new post of duty, ashore or afloat, he shall receive transportation for his family and for his household goods to the new station to which he is ordered. In all cases of officers ordered to sea duty, the practice is to furnish transportation for the families to the "home yard" or "home port" of the ship to which the officer is ordered. The secretary of the navy designates the "home yard" and "home port" of all vessels.

The law provides that when an officer is ordered from duty at a station on board ship to a new post of duty, ashore or afloat, he shall receive transportation for his family and for his household goods to the new station to which he is ordered. In all cases of officers ordered to sea duty, the practice is to furnish transportation for the families to the "home yard" or "home port" of the ship to which the officer is ordered. The secretary of the navy designates the "home yard" and "home port" of all vessels.

Vessels of the battle force are assigned to "home yards" at Mare Island, California, and at Bremerton, Washington. These battleships, cruisers and destroyers are assigned a "home port" at San Pedro or San Diego.

If an officer on shore duty at an Atlantic port is ordered to a destroyer of the battle force, this destroyer has a "home port" at San Diego and a "home yard" at Mare Island. This means that the officer can obtain transportation for his family to cover the journey from Washington to San Diego or Mare Island.

Since 1932, the cruisers and destroyers of the scouting force, now at San Pedro and San Diego, but she's Sapho all right.

She told me so herself.

She didn't know it, she said, till the Swami told her. Of course, she had always been sort of restless and dissatisfied and that sort of thing, don't you know, always seeking new religions, new philosophies, new theories, why even new houses.

Her poor little, every day husband didn't understand, she didn't understand at all. Why he even wanted to call in a brain specialist to see if there wasn't something they could do about it.

I was quite interested in Sapho, I asked her to let me see some of her verse and she was quite eager about it, dear soul.

It didn't seem much of anything to me, but then, of course, I belong to the earth cycle, whatever that is, and couldn't be expected to understand.

But this Cleopatra business is rather getting on my nerves.

Whenever I go out to an "evening" these days, I always meet a brand new Cleopatra. I can count 12 of them now, some fat, and some scrawny, some tall, and some dumpy—but all Cleopatras.

You'd never think it to look at them—but there they are—it makes me nervous, I'm afraid they'll begin to quarrel about who's who, in the Esoteric circle—who's real and who's phony, if you know what I mean.

The Swamis are not nervous at all. They always calm and smiling—why shouldn't they be, and they telling all the discontented wives that are about, they can't stand John, when they were used to Antonys and Caesars in the good old days.

I do wish I could believe I was a reincarnation, don't you wish you could believe you were?

I'd love to be Cleopatra, or Sapho, or Mary Queen of Scots, or somebody, wouldn't you?

No, I'm not laughing, I think it's sort of pathetic myself, this Cleopatra fad when you come to think of it.

Listen, World! -:- -:- By Elsie Robinson

THEY GAVE HER THE WORKS!

"Haze her!" said the Dean.
And haze her they did!
Be a woman doctor, would she!

Go through medical college with men . . . sit with men in classes while male professors talked about Human Babies . . . work with men never pickled male bodies? She'd made up her mind to do all this at a time when a decent girl wasn't even seen in public. Elsie Robinson supposed to know. How A Man Was Made, much less discuss or dissect his tabooed flesh. Very well then—let her get what she deserved! Give her the works!

Up from the sweet, walled wilderness of the eastern Sierra young Nellie MacKnight had come, to study medicine. But a woman doctor in the early 90's—impossible!

Ladies were supposed to be Ladies in the good old 80's and 90's, and Nothing Else but. Even the rebels who were fighting for Equal Rights still recognized certain decencies. There was May Sutton Bundy with her outlandish yen for professional tennis . . . but, at least, she entered the court properly arrayed in long skirt, high-boned collar and 18-inch sailor pinned tight to a four-inch wad of pompadour.

Yes—whatever crazy notions might be circulating above her ears, the New Woman of '92 still garbed herself as a lady at all points south thereof. As evidence, read the Delineator's description of a snappy swimming suit. Is it accurate? It is! Ye Authoress wore one herself!

"Choose a suit of dark blue, or better still, of black material. In dressing for the water this tasteful woman first dons a thin undervest, and over that an old pair of corsets from which the bones have been removed. Then she puts on a pair of long black yarn stockings, for woolen stockings look much better when wet than cotton ones. Elastic about the knees keeps the stockings in place.

"Then comes the under part of the black bathing suit, the waist and knee trousers being in one piece. The waist has a sailor collar and the sleeves reach nearly to the elbows. The skirt would extend to shoe tops if shoes were worn; this is buttoned to the waist and a belt completes the costume."

Were they funning? They were not! Behind those cute costumes and coy conventions rose Sex Prejudice as cruel as any that ever ambushed off a slave wife's nose or breast, or doomed an impudent maiden to slow death by torture of ants. And God help the girl who defied them!

Nellie MacKnight did—and paid a price for her doctor's degree that would have made many a strong man duck for cover. If she had walked, naked, up Market street, advertising herself for sale, she could hardly have met deeper disrespect . . . she would certainly have found much wider understanding.

For Fallen Women had a definite place in the 19th century world—and a powerful and pleasant place it often was. But a Woman Doctor had no place at all! Nor should she achieve any, if the men could help it!

A few rare women had preceded this shy, courageous younger who now—forty years after—tells her story in that brave book "A Child Went Forth" (Gotham House, publisher). Things had happened to those women—incredible things.

The Board of Regents had bitterly fought their registration; had given way only when they could find no legal loop hole to refuse. Then they had had to battle against the massed malice of the faculty and student body.

"Haze her!" said the Dean when the first female pioneer, Lucy Wanzer, entered in 1873. "It's the old story; women want to get in everywhere. We have to accept this woman student, as she has the best of us.

"The law has decided in her favor, but you can make it so uncomfortable that she cannot stay. We will get rid of her in short order! Of course she will complain, but we will say we are sorry but we cannot lecture to two classes. With just one woman, we will make short work of it."

"Haze her!" said the Dean. And haze her they did! Shameful incidents to repeat, impossible to reprint in a newspaper but they are as much a part of American history as Indian tortures or World War atrocities, and even more significant.

Yes, Lucy Wanzer had paid a ghastly price for her right to serve humanity. And the war was still on when Nellie MacKnight came along.

Sneers, guffaws, a constant battery of obscene stories greeted her. She was made the target for public foul abuse by the lecturing doctors. Then came her first assignment to the dissecting room. She was to work with a man. Before her, on a line covered table, lay the rotting remnants of a male. Masculine eyes, in a wall, turned toward her . . . leering . . . obscenely speculating.

It was her test. Could she go on? Shamed, sick—the room blurred through stinging tears. Then, suddenly, shining through the darkness, came that vision which had first sent her on her way . . . the vision of suffering . . . a gallant old grandmother, dying needlessly in the tortures of typhoid.

Aunt Mary—that brave pioneer mother who had followed her man to make a home on the fierce Dakota prairie—strangling to death in the paroxysms of asthma. Women screaming, sobbing in the awful travail of birth for which there was as yet no mitigation.

Human suffering—it was calling her. It was challenging her. Could she go on. Take what those je ring men gave?

She could! She did! Today men, women, little children bless Helen M. Doyle, M.D., because—despite the stinging tears, the blistering blushes—she set her jaw, seized the scalper and WENT ON!

What price women's rights when there weren't any!

BUT THANK GOD FOR THE WOMEN WHO HAD THE COURAGE TO PAY IT!

Human Side of the News; Leaders in Medicine

By Edwin C. Hill

The two doctors Mayo, perhaps the greatest name in American medicine, produce real news with their confident assertion that the normal span of life will soon be seventy, instead of sixty, as it is at present, and twice the thirty-five it was a hundred years ago.

It was just fifty-two years ago that a country doctor cut his Rochester, Minnesota, let his two sons help him a little in St. Mary's Hospital, established by the Sisters of St. Francis on condition that the old Doctor Mayo be its chief. Today, those two sons, Dr. William James Mayo and Dr. Charles Horace Mayo, are rounding out a lifetime of immeasurable service to science and to their fellowmen.

OFTEN IN FREE NEWS

They are in the news often. It is a rare month in which no college or scientific society of foreign government fails to pay them honor. Dr. William now tells us: "The list of diseases which can be cured is ever increasing and the span of life is being lengthened." This is being brought appreciably nearer to the day when there shall be no unnecessary deaths."

William Mayo is nearing 73. His brother, Charles, is 68. They were born and reared in Minnesota in the days of stage coaches and hostile Indians. Their doctor father trained them in his own path, sent them off to college and put them in a drugstore when they matriculated.

The Sisters of St. Francis went to Rochester to minister to the victims of a tornado. The hospital was built. And in less than ten years the world was wearing a path to Rochester, to its hospital and to the two brothers whose light of genius shone across all the Seven Seas.

FORGET BILLS TO POOR

They have held rigidly to their special work—Dr. Charles operating from the throat up, and Dr. William from the throat down. When the railroad king, James J. Hill, sent the Mayos a check for $10,000 they returned it to him with information that in due course he would get his bill.

It was the same James J. Hill who said to Dr. William Mayo: "Why in the world don't you go to New York?" "We have all we can do here," was the reply. It is Dr William who has had amazing success in cases of gallstones, cancer and diseases of the intestinal tract.

Only four years ago they added a $3,000,000 clinic to the $5,000,000 hospital, which grew out of little St. Mary's of the good Sisters of St. Francis.

It is said of them that their prices are high for the rich, but they forget to send bills to the poor. Money probably means nothing to them any more.

Sir Lenthal Cheatle, the great British surgeon, issues still another helpful, hopeful message for distressed humanity. Sir Lenthal has devoted a lifime to a valiant war against cancer. He is Britain's greatest cancer specialist.

He knows as much about that terrible scourge as any living man, and probably more than most. He brings news of a discovery of tremendous importance in diagnosing the disease in its early stages.

A dye has been found which will color healthy cells, but which does not affect the cells of cancer. A sure means of detecting the coming of cancer, long before. Sir Lenthal finds hope in early diagnosis, but sees the only definite gains so far, in radium, surgery and X-rays. At King's College Hospital, in London, he has examined countless so-called cures, always hopefully, and always finding that the battle has still to be won. He is one Englishman that says nice things about us when he goes back home.

They're All Cleopatras -:- By Winifred Black

Winifred Black

Now Cleopatra, won't you please stop coming back to earth, and go and stay in Egypt or somewhere, just for a change.

Why on earth do you want to come wandering around Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska, Delaware and ready to send up a cloud of incense for your delight, and there are the Nubians with their peacock fans and their gorgeous embroidered shawls and all you have to do is to raise one of those delicate eyebrows of yours and have strings of pearls flowing like rivulets, and oh regular cascades of diamonds and rubies and things.

What on earth am I talking about?

Well now, Cleopatra, you ought to know.

There's been a regular tidal wave of Swamis during this last year or so, and all these Swamis always tell you that you are a reincarnation of somebody very particular, and usually the somebody is Cleopatra.

Oh, yes, I did meet Sapho the other evening at a party. Her name on this earth is Mrs. John Smith, and you'd never in the world dream she was burning Sapho to look at her.

She's rather a wistful little person, to be honest about it. Her eyes are anything but large and liquid. As a matter of fact she wears double-lensed spectacles—

FAMILY SIGNALS

When Nellie shakes her head at me
I say: "I thank you. No more tea!"
The merest lifting of her eye
Commands this answer: "No more pie!"
A gentle kick against my shin
Means, "Stop that tale ere you begin."

A set of signals is a scheme
To regulate a football team;
A baseball player taps his heel—
The man on first prepares to steal,
But games are very often lost
When comrades get their signals crossed.

Through thirty years of married life
I've taken signals from the wife.
Let Nellie's eyes look down, I grin
And wipe the gravy from my chin;
And when she slightly moves her head,
I take the other spoon instead.

Two hearts that beat as one, are we.
Two souls that function perfectly;
Two minds with but a single thought,
And thus I do just what I ought,
And am forever put at ease
By Nellie's signal victories.

Stars and Stripes

For the first time in 40 years the Georgia peach crop has not been killed, so the people of that state have got to find something else to hold their annual funeral ceremony over.

Beauty experts have discovered why some women look better at dinner than they do at breakfast. What they lack at breakfast they "make up" for at dinner.

We shudder to think of what is likely to happen if those Bolivians and Paraguayans should be forced to quit fighting and go to work for a living. The Gran Chaco has never seen a sword turned into a ploughshare.

Vice-President Marshall gained fame by remarking that what America needed was a good five-cent cigar. Vice-President Garner might paraphrase today by saying we need a good "two-for-five."
